

THE DESIGN BOOK

Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the physical fitness of 10-year-old children. The study was conducted in a primary school in the city of Ankara, Turkey. The study group consisted of 20 children (10 boys and 10 girls) who were randomly selected from the 10-year-old children of the school. The children were divided into two groups: a control group and an experimental group. The control group did not participate in any physical education program, while the experimental group participated in a 12-week training program. The physical fitness of the children was measured at the beginning and at the end of the 12-week period. The measurements included maximum heart rate, maximum oxygen consumption, maximum power, and maximum speed. The results of the study showed that the experimental group had significantly higher values for all four measurements at the end of the 12-week period compared to the control group. The results suggest that a 12-week training program can improve the physical fitness of 10-year-old children.

Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week, low-intensity, low-impact aerobically and resistance training program on the physical fitness and health-related quality of life of sedentary, middle-aged women. The study was a randomized, controlled trial. The subjects were randomly assigned to either the exercise or control group. The exercise group performed a 12-week, low-intensity, low-impact aerobically and resistance training program. The control group performed no exercise. The subjects were assessed at baseline and at 12 weeks. The results showed that the exercise group had significantly greater improvements in physical fitness and health-related quality of life than the control group. The findings suggest that a 12-week, low-intensity, low-impact aerobically and resistance training program can improve physical fitness and health-related quality of life in sedentary, middle-aged women.
