The Millennium Development Goals (MDGs) are designed to inspire efforts to improve people's lives by, among other priorities, halving extreme poverty by 2015 (1). Analogously, concerns about global decline in biodiversity and degradation of ecosystem services (2) gave rise in 1992 to the Convention on Biological Diversity (CBD). The CBD target "to achieve by 2010 a significant reduction of the current rate of biodiversity loss" was incorporated into the MDGs in 2002. Our lack of progress toward the 2010 target (3, 4) could undermine achievement of the MDGs and poverty reduction in the long term. With increasing global challenges, such as population growth, climate change, and overconsumption of ecosystem services, we need further integration of the poverty alleviation and biodiversity conservation agendas.

The links between poverty and the environment are, unsurprisingly, complex (5, 6) (Fig. 1). Some attempts have been made to identify a relation between development and biodiversity, but these have yielded mixed results (5). Action is urgently needed to identify and quantify the links between biodiversity and ecosystem services on the one hand, and poverty reduction on the other, while taking into account the global, regional, and local drivers of biodiversity loss in poor areas.

Tackling the root causes of both biodiversity loss and poverty can lead to complementary positive results. For example, reducing population pressure by promoting voluntary reductions in fertility in impoverished regions could support conservation of biodiversity and faster poverty alleviation (7). However, there may be complex trade-offs, especially in the short term. Trade liberalization, for instance, might increase the supply of food commodities and could reduce prices in food-importing countries, which would remove some pressure on these countries' natural habitats. But reductions in trade barriers might also lead to increased production in food-exporting countries where commercial agriculture could increase vulnerability to deforestation, pests, diseases, and/or natural disasters, and might reduce the availability of ecosystem services (8, 9). Nevertheless, countervailing efforts to maintain biodiversity must be sensitive to human needs if they are to retain public support (10).

The scientific and development policy communities should focus on jointly articulating and addressing the critical research questions that, when answered, will help ensure that poverty alleviation and conservation efforts produce win-win outcomes, or at least minimize harm to either agenda. To ensure greater synergies, we suggest the following actions. Attention must focus on constructing and meeting a new biodiversity target for the remaining MDG period and beyond. The next target should be more specific, similarly time-limited, reasonably achievable, and should address the consequences of biodiversity loss globally and for the most vulnerable people and societies.

Any near-term gains in reducing extreme poverty will be maintained only if environmental sustainability is also achieved.

It should be supported by a small set of indicators (11) that measure trends in the state of biodiversity and ecosystem services, drivers of biodiversity loss and activities to safeguard biodiversity.

We need evidence-based interventions that can address both poverty reduction and environmental sustainability. In agriculture, for instance, we can use existing land more efficiently; we can pursue development that protects or enhances biodiversity; and we can improve productivity in ways that maintain ecosystem services, through institutional changes to secure better access to seeds, markets, and expertise, combined with adaptive applications of technologies (12). Similarly, finance and technology for adaptation, disaster management, and reduced emissions from deforestation and forest degradation (13) are particularly important in helping developing countries deal with climate change.

Future projects should explicitly monitor the impact poverty alleviation efforts have on ecosystems and their services; similarly, conservationists must better document the impact their interventions have on the poor. Ideally, interdisciplinary science that helps to identify the most cost-effective solutions will ensure that future environment and development projects are implemented, not just simultaneously, but in an integrated fashion.

Poverty alleviation and biodiversity agendas need to be jointly presented to policymakers. Establishment of a proposed Intergovernmental Platform on Biodiversity and Ecosystem Services to complement the existing Intergovernmental Panel on Climate

Conservation Research, Policy and Practice William J. Sutherland, Peter N. M. Brotherton, Zoe G. Davies, Nancy Ockendon, Nathalie Pettorelli, Juliet A. Vickery, 2020-04-16 Conservation research is essential for advancing knowledge but to make an impact scientific evidence must influence conservation policies decision making and practice This raises a multitude of challenges How should evidence be collated and presented to policymakers to maximise its impact How can effective collaboration between conservation scientists and decision makers be established How can the resulting messages be communicated to bring about change Emerging from a successful international symposium organised by the British Ecological Society and the Cambridge Conservation Initiative this is the first book to practically address these questions across a wide range of conservation topics Well renowned experts guide readers through global case studies and their own experiences A must read for practitioners researchers graduate students and policymakers wishing to enhance the prospect of their work making a difference This title is also available as Open Access on Cambridge Core

Key Topics in Conservation Biology David Macdonald, Katrina Service, 2009-03-12 This important new book addresses key topics in contemporary conservation biology Written by an internationally renowned team of authors Key Topics in Conservation Biology explores cutting edge issues in modern biodiversity conservation including controversial subjects such as rarity and prioritization conflict between people and wildlife the human aspect of conservation the relevance of animal welfare and the role of nongovernment organizations Key Topics also tackles the management of wildlife diseases and examines the impact of bushmeat extraction and the role of hunting in the conservationist's toolbox Other essays explore basic tools of conservation biology such as computer modeling conservation genetics metapopulation processes and the ingenious use of hi tech equipment Each topic is explored by three top international experts assembled to bring their cross cutting knowledge to a penetrating synthesis of the issues from both theoretical and practical perspectives The interdisciplinary nature of biodiversity conservation is reflected throughout the book Each essay examines the fundamental principles of the topic the methodologies involved and crucially the human dimension In this way Key Topics in Conservation Biology embraces the issues from cutting edge ecological science to policy environmental economics governance ethics and the practical issues of implementation Key Topics in Conservation Biology will be a valuable resource in universities and colleges government departments and conservation agencies It is aimed particularly at senior undergraduate and graduate students in conservation biology and wildlife management and those taking Masters degrees in any field relevant to conservation Conservation practitioners policy makers and the wider general public eager to understand more about important environmental issues will also find this book invaluable Rewilding Paul Jepson,Cain Blythe,2022-04-05 How rewilding has transformed the conservation movement combining radical scientific insights with practical innovations Progressive scientists and conservation professionals are pursuing a radical new approach to restoring ecosystems rewilding By recovering the ripple effect generated by the interactions among plant and animal species and natural disturbances rewilding seeks to repair ecosystems by removing them from human engineering and reassembling guilds of megafauna from a mix of surviving wild and feral species and de domesticated breeds including elk bison and feral horses Written by two leaders in the field this book offers an abundantly illustrated guide to the science of rewilding It shows in fascinating detail the ways in which ecologists are reassembling ecosystems that allow natural interactions rather than human interventions to steer their environmental trajectories Rewilding looks into a past in which industrialization and globalization downgraded grasslands describes current projects designed to recover self willed ecosystems and envisions the future with ten predictions for a rewilded planet It shows how rewilding is shaking up conservation science and policy bringing new hope and renewed purpose to efforts to revive essential ecological processes Color illustrations capture moments of beauty in nature and offer enlightening infographics and visualizations

Conservation Francis Gilbert,Hilary Gilbert,2019 La 4e de couverture indique In this title an ecologist and a social scientist explore how human actions affect ecological communities and ask whether science can solve our most pressing ecological issues They describe how the world s environments have been modified by humans since the earliest times they explore the interplay between human wellbeing and the conservation of biodiversity and they consider how we can learn to live with nature to make a truly sustainable world Decolonizing Nature William Mark Adams,Martin Mulligan,2003 British imperialism was almost unparalleled in its historical and geographical reach leaving a legacy of entrenched social transformation in nations and cultures in every part of the globe Colonial annexation and government were based on an all encompassing system that integrated and controlled political economic social and ethnic relations and required a similar annexation and control of natural resources and nature itself Colonial ideologies were expressed not only in the progressive exploitation of nature but also in the emerging discourses of conservation At the start of the 21st century the conservation of nature is of undiminished importance in post colonial societies yet the legacy of colonial thinking endures What should conservation look like today and what indeed whose ideas should it be based upon Decolonizing Nature explores the influence of the colonial legacy on contemporary conservation and on ideas about the relationships between people politics and nature in countries and cultures that were once part of the British Empire It locates the historical development of the theory and practice of conservation at both the periphery and the centre firmly within the context of this legacy and considers its significance today It highlights the present and future challenges to conservationists of contemporary global neo colonialism The contributors to this volume include both academics and conservation practitioners They provide wide ranging and insightful perspectives on the need for and practical ways to achieve new forms of informed ethical engagement between people and nature

Ecological Challenges and Conservation Conundrums John A. Wiens, 2025-02-25 Short compelling but mostly thought provoking essays that encompass many of the central issues shaping ecology and conservation in the changing world Collected essays from one of the best known ecologists and conservationists in the world Includes all issues at the cutting edge of the interface between ecology and conservation Attractive to a broad audience of ecologists conservationists natural resource managers policy makers and naturalists

Readings in Conservation Ecology George W. Cox, 1969 Ecosystem approach to conservation problems Problems related to ecosystem energy flow Problems related to ecosystem nutrient cycling processes Outlook for the future

Advanced Introduction to Community-based Conservation Fikret Berkes, 2021-01-29 Professor Fikret Berkes provides a unique introduction to the social and interdisciplinary dimensions of biodiversity conservation Examining a range of approaches new ideas controversies and debates he demonstrates that biodiversity loss is not primarily a technical issue but a social problem that operates in an economic political and cultural context Berkes concludes that conservation must be democratized in order to broaden its support base and build more inclusive constituencies for conservation

Biodiversity Conservation and Environmental Change Lindsey Gillson, 2015 Ecosystems today are dynamic and complex leaving conservationists faced with the paradox of conserving moving targets New approaches to conservation are now required that aim to conserve ecological function and process rather than attempt to protect static snapshots of biodiversity To do this effectively long term information on ecosystem variability and resilience is needed While there is a wealth of such information in palaeoecology archaeology and historical ecology it remains an underused resource by conservation ecologists In bringing together the disciplines of neo and palaeoecology and integrating them with conservation biology this novel text illustrates how an understanding of long term change in ecosystems can in turn inform and influence their conservation and management in the Anthropocene By looking at the history of traditional management climate change disturbance and land use the book describes how a long term perspective on landscape change can inform current and pressing conservation questions such as whether elephants should be culled how best to manage fire and whether ecosystems can or should be re wilded Biodiversity Conservation and Environmental Change is suitable for senior undergraduate and post graduate students in conservation ecology palaeoecology biodiversity conservation landscape ecology environmental change and natural resource management It will also be of relevance and use to a global market of conservation practitioners researchers educators and policy makers
