

Practice: Principles of Natural Selection

Read the following scenarios. Then explain how natural selection will occur in each. Include the four principles of natural selection (overproduction of offspring, adaptation, variation, and descent with modification) as well as what condition(s) drive natural selection.

1. Some worms eat at night (meaning they are nocturnal) and some worms eat during the day (meaning they are diurnal.) Most birds eat only during the day, so they are only eating diurnal worms, due to the fact that the nocturnal worms are burrowing during this time. Each spring when the worms reproduce about 500 offspring are born but only 100 of them live long enough to reproduce themselves.

There are 2 types of worms in the area (diurnal and nocturnal). Birds do not eat nocturnal worms (nocturnal worms advantage). 100 of the original 500 worms survive to reproduce. More nocturnal worms survive and reproduce, and Nocturnal worm population increases; diurnal worm population decreases

2. Some emus run fast (between 30-35 mph) and other emus run slower (between 20-25 mph.) Dingos are the main predators of emus and at their absolute fastest can reach speeds of up to 30 mph. Emus lay between 30-50 eggs a year, but only 20 of those eggs will live long enough to mature into their own reproductive age.

There are slow and fast ostriches. Fast ostriches can outrun the jackals (fast ostriches advantage). Rodents eat the eggs before they hatch. The fast emus can outrun the jackals, and Fast emus population increases; slow emus population decreases

3. Polar bears tend to have a varying thickness in coats: some are thin, some are medium, and some are thick. Due to global warming, temperatures have been slowly rising over time. Most of the bears have 2 cubs a breeding season, but only 1 survives the temperatures.
