

and sympathy and support from many quarters. And to what end? Why should colored men organize a national body? What do they wish to do? What can they do?

Of this much we can be certain, we shall never do anything we do not attempt. On the other hand, we may attempt many things which we can never accomplish. Yet, for all that, we should attempt, just as an honest man at the risk of his life makes the attempt to defend his home, his wife and his children from a powerful intruder.

The world spurns the coward who fears to try. Besides there is no telling what can be done by thoughtful, intelligent co-operation. All the privileges we enjoy: freedom, suffrage—though greatly restricted now in some sections,—the opening of the larger colleges and universities, etc., have come to us after the long and painful but ceaseless contention of a quondam hopeless minority. At least in such an organization we can make the country know and realize that as men we will not, without protestation or an effort to obtain our own, allow others to take what rightfully belongs to us. The answer to the other questions may be summed up in the objects of the Niagara Movement as expressed in its constitution:—

- (a) Freedom of speech and criticism.
- (b) An unfettered and unsubsidized press.
- (c) Manhood suffrage.
- (d) Abolition of caste distinctions based simply on race and color.
- (e) The recognition of the principle of human brotherhood as a practical present creed.
- (f) The recognition of the highest and best human training as the monopoly of no class or race.
- (g) A belief in the dignity of labor.
- (h) United effort to realize these ideals under wise and courageous leadership.

The Niagara Movement represents, I might say, the final attitude to which every courageous, race-loving, self-respecting, intelligent Negro has been driven. After waiting many years, following the line of least resistance, during which we have been deprived by our ruthless enemies of many rights and privileges, we have come to the decision to stand hard and fast by all the
