Bookbinding For Schools:

Printing and Bookbinding for Schools Samuel Jesse Vaughn, 1912 Printing and Bookbinding for Schools S. J. Vaughn, 2015-06-24 Excerpt from Printing and Bookbinding for Schools Woodwork has been quite generally introduced into the high school and grammar school With all the defects of the earlier presentation of the subject not to speak of those in later efforts it has made a surprisingly general appeal and has met with unusual and deserved success Some of the methods employed tending to place a ban on originality and thought have brought it far short of its possibilities in the aid of intellectual development To a considerable extent the woodwork has not touched as intimately as it might the vital interests of the pupils and of the homes and by its own limitations it has not had an especially strong social bearing The need is not less woodwork but more original and thoughtful woodwork and also a greater variety of other constructive work which touches more and wider interests and which may appeal to those not particularly adapted to that one line In this way it will be possible to strengthen the places where woodwork is weak So far experience with printing in school indicates that it makes quite as general and permanent an appeal as woodwork Printing makes this very strong appeal to the boys because in the first place the printshop comes as near to reproducing a great world industry in the school as any other line of industrial work Instead of doing simply the roustabout work of the beginning apprentice the boys are put to work with the regular shop equipment and soon are ready to begin turning out some printing It is a common thing to hear a boy remark This is just the way they do it down town About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works Bookbinding for Schools James Samuel Hewitt-Bates, 1927

Printing and Bookbinding for Schools (Classic Reprint) S. J. Vaughn, 2017-12-22 Excerpt from Printing and Bookbinding for Schools Besides this there is probably no other line of Manual Arts work in which pupils grade boys especially get so practical a working knowledge of the actual shop work as in printing This fact is often turned to good advantage by the boys for there can scarcely be found a commercial printshop anywhere which is not glad to employ one or two boys during vacation time if they know a little about the work and are interested About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any
