Heaven and Hell Takarabe Toriko, 2018-09-30 Takarabe Toriko's autobiographical novel Heaven and Hell is a beautiful chilling account of her childhood in Manchukuo the puppet state established by the Japanese in northeast China in 1932 As seen through the eyes of a precocious young girl named Masuko the frontier town of Jiamusi and its inhabitants are by turns enchanting bemusing and horrifying Takarabe skillfully captures Masuko's voice with language that savors Manchukuo's lush forests and vast terrain but violence and murder are ever present as much a part of the scenery as the grand Sungari River Masuko recounts the Heaven of her early life in Jiamusi a place so cold in winter her joints freeze as she walks to school She accepts this world with its gentle ways and terrible brutality because it is the only home she has known Masuko feels at ease wandering among the street vendors hawking their hot and sticky steamed cakes or watching the cook slaughter ducks for dinner and takes pleasure in following the routines of her Chinese Russian and Japanese neighbors Her world is shattered in 1945 when she and her family must flee their adopted home and struggle along with other Japanese settlers to return to Japan This second half of the book the Hell of refugee life is heartbreaking and disturbing yet described with ferocious honesty
