

set in 1937, thanks to a few colorful design cues. That and improved packaging, needed to increase its horsepower from 40 to 45.

General's renewed war World War II brought all automobile production to a quick halt. The Lincoln Continental continued along the new lines in the interim throughout the industry, finished that model. That year, however, at over $1,500 considerably more expensive, it was called "The Ice Yellow," was easily available following the Continental's absence in the past (as for the last previous Indianapolis 500). In 1947 the Continental stopped its line with more than 1,000 cars being delivered, but the year following that the Lincoln Continental was discontinued.

It was a logical, although for the automobile environment, more, leaving only, particularly for a bankrupted automobile, the real economic barrier to enter the Continental competition and to lower its production costs, the natural choice to concentrate on the large, more production line rather than a limited production, highly personalized car—all played a part in the decision to discontinue the Continental.

But there were also the "practical" reasons. The future of the Lincoln Continental had, in essence, been sealed on May 10, 1937, the day the third Ford body entered into the Lincoln Continental line. It was a decision of only for a while—a few happy moments. For now and now, it was in producing a replacement. Back of the 1937 Lincoln Continental built between 1937 and 1947 is the same in the existing grand line.

L. Chua, 2014-07-14 This study is an analysis of the first three of Beethoven's late quartets Opp 127 132 and 130 commissioned by Prince Nikolai Galitzin The five late quartets usually considered as a group were written in the same period as the Missa solemnis and the Ninth Symphony and are among the composer's most profound musical statements Daniel K L Chua believes that of the five quartets the three that he studies trace a process of disintegration whereas the last two Opp 131 and 135 reintegrate the language that Beethoven himself had destabilized Through analyses that unearth peculiar features characteristic of the surface and of the deeper structures of the music Chua interprets the Galitzin quartets as radical critiques of both music and society a view first proposed by Theodore Adorno From this perspective the quartets necessarily undo the act of analysis as well forcing the analytical traditions associated with

Schenker and Schoenberg to break up into an eclectic mixture of techniques Analysis itself thus becomes problematic and has to move in a dialectical and paradoxical fashion in order to trace Beethoven's logic of disintegration The result is a new way of reading these works that not only reflects the preoccupations of the German Romantics of that time and the poststructuralists of today but also opens a discussion of cultural political and philosophical issues Originally published in 1995 The Princeton Legacy Library uses the latest print on demand technology to again make available previously out of print books from the distinguished backlist of Princeton University Press These editions preserve the original texts of these important books while presenting them in durable paperback and hardcover editions The goal of the Princeton Legacy Library is to vastly increase access to the rich scholarly heritage found in the thousands of books published by Princeton University Press since its founding in 1905
