Concanavalin A Tushar Chowdhury, 2012-12-06 Concanavalin A Con A a plant lectin has become an object of extensive research not only for the biochemist but also for the biologist biophysicist pathologist immunologist and others On April 19 20 1974 a group of scholars from four continents met on the campus of the University of Oklahoma for an International Symposium on Con A This volume contains all lectures presented by the invited speakers on this occasion as well as the abstracts for all shorter technical papers which were presented Further the editors invited additional contributions from a few selected laboratories to cover the areas not covered in the symposium itself This volume then reports the present status of research with Con A In a sense it is encyclopedic and should be a useful reference tool to the worker in this field The newcomer to this area will find that a careful study of this book will bring him up to date with the latest techniques approaches and the state of the art in this specialized area of research as well as with traps and ensnarements in which he need not get entangled again Starting at the molecular level and advancing from there to the organismic level as well as to a number of highly specialized areas this volume presents the most complete survey of research findings with Con A available today The editors wish to acknowledge the generous financial support provided by the University of Oklahoma through its President Dr

The Smooth Muscle of the Artery Stewart Wolf, 2013-03-09 This volume contains the edited proceedings of a workshop conference THE SMOOTH MUSCLE OF THE ARTERIAL WALL held at Max Planck Haus Heidelberg West Germany on the occasion of the dedication of the new Myocardial Infarct Institute of the University of Heidelberg The conference was a sequel to one held three years earlier at Lindau West Germany on THE ARTERY AND THE PROCESS OF ARTERIO

SCLEROSIS The earlier conference examined available data and conflicting theories on the pathogenesis of arteriosclerosis. A major yield of this gathering was a consensus that smooth muscle cell proliferation in the sub endothelial space is a fundamental feature of atherogenesis. It was therefore decided in a second conference to bring together existing knowledge of arterial smooth muscle and of the structure and function of smooth muscle in general. Accordingly an international and interdisciplinary group of experts were gathered together to assess current knowledge to attempt reconciliation of disparate data and synthesis of widely scattered information and to identify critical areas of ignorance. As before the conference was conducted in the form of a dialogue with only a minimal number of formal presentations. Grateful acknowledgement for financial support of the conference is extended to The Government of Baden Wurttemberg West Germany The Marine Biomedical Institute of the University of Texas Medical Branch Galveston Texas The Office of Naval Research Washington D C

Biochemical Pharmacology of Ethanol Edward Majchrowicz, 2013-11-11 A number of excellent symposia reviews and monographs on the biology of ethanol have been published during the last decade. Although it may appear that another such publication may be superfluous the subject of alcohol abuse is still open for further exploration and the field of the biochemical pharmacology of ethanol is in its infancy. This is evidenced for example by the unavailability of any drugs that are designed specifically for the treatment of alcohol intoxication or alcohol addiction. The impetus for this publication was generated by a spontaneous enthusiasm following the symposium on Biochemical Pharmacology of Ethanol that was organized at the annual meeting of the American Chemical Society Division of Biological Chemistry in August 1973 in Chicago. It was the first symposium on such a topic ever included in the program of that large society of American chemists. The original aim of the symposium was to acquaint the members of the society with some basic facts about the biological chemistry of ethanol. The symposium included seven papers and covered a relatively narrow range of ethanol biochemistry. In view of the enthusiasm shown at the Chemical Society meeting the panelists decided to publish the program and to amplify it by inclusion of additional topics which have remained relatively unexplored in earlier publications. In addition reviews have been included which discuss old topics from a new perspective.

Explorations in Aging V. Cristofalo, 2013-03-09 The three of us working in different institutions but in the same city were very aware of the differences between our diverse approaches to the biology of aging and our perceptions of the subject matter. However three years ago we began to hold informal meetings to discuss our research. These meetings eventually became more frequent and with this association we became increasingly cognizant of the commonality of our research problems despite our separate perspectives. The idea for this symposium therefore grew from our awareness that the underlying problem of the biological basis for aging was a common denominator in our research. The papers presented here represent three areas of active investigation: cell division, biological membranes and hormonal regulation. They are submitted with the expectations that a greater understanding of the role of each of these separate approaches will help clarify not only the interrelationships between our fields of research but more importantly the biology of aging itself

Control Mechanisms in Development Russel Meints, 2013-03-08 This symposium was not only a happy event for the University of Nebraska but it marked a milestone in the history of the biological sciences here The symposium cele in the most appropriate way possible the creation of the new School of Life brated Sciences and ushered in what I believe will be a period of substantial development for biology on this campus I am immensely proud of the faculty of this new School and I have every confidence that the School s reputation and achievements will continue to grow As you all know this university has had and still has distinguished scientists in the biological sciences and has offered fme programs at both the undergraduate and graduate level But both the formation of the School of Ufe Sciences and the construction of the new Ufe Sciences Building promise a brighter future in this important area The School of Life Sciences was formed from the Departments of Botany Micro biology and Zoology together with staff members in Biochemistry from both the Department of Chemistry and from the former Department of Biochemistry and Nutri tion in the College of Agriculture as well as staff members in the College of Agriculture s Department of Plant Pathology Our whole notion was to build a core unit in biology that would cross the lines between the College of Arts and Sciences and the College of Agriculture in order to combine strengths which exist in both areas

Diet and Atherosclerosis Cesare Sirtori, 2013-03-09 After the success of the two previous meetings on Typing of Hyperlipoproteinemias in Milan in 1971 and in Rome in 1972 an important part of each of which was devoted to the discussion of therapy the Italian Society for the Study of Atherosclerosis the Institute Superiore di Sanita and the Fondazione Giovanni Lorenzini planned a special treatment of this important topic This meeting was held in Rome in November 1973 at the Istituto Superiore di Sanita On this occasion the most important subjects developed in recent years by the most qualified centers of experimental and clinical research were reported A broad discussion took place regarding the role of diet in causing or worsening the biohumoral changes and the lesions peculiar to arteriosclerosis while other distinguished authors reported on the role of diet in delaying or correcting the dyslipidemic state

Protides of the Biological Fluids H. Peeters, 2014-05-20 Protides of the Biological Fluids reviews trends in research concerning protides of the biological fluids with emphasis on tumor associated antigens TAAs lectins and separation methods such as electrophoresis and isoelectric focusing Examples of TAAs discussed in this book are carcinoembryonic antigens mesenchyme associated antigens and oncofetal pancreatic antigens The mode of action of lectins as well as lectin binding sites are also considered This book is comprised of 195 chapters and begins with an overview of the strategy and monitoring of protein fractionation followed by a discussion on the self nonself concept of cancer and autoimmune diseases presence of trophoblast antigens on the membranes of some human tumor and transformed cells and non specific cross reacting antigens in human blood monocytes Subsequent chapters explore the metabolism of carcinoembryonic antigen and alpha fetoprotein during delivery amino acid sequence identity of tissue polypeptide antigen fragments from different sources isoferritins glycoproteins and viral antigens and crossed immunoelectrophoresis of yeast plasma membrane lectin receptors The final section is devoted to separation techniques such as isotachophoresis chromatography electrophoresis and isoelectric focusing This monograph will be of value to biologists and researchers interested in protides of the biological fluids

Phylogeny W. Hildemann,2013-06-29 There are two now classic reasons for the widespread and continuing interest in the phylogeny of immune reactivities and structure First is the fundamental concern of biologists with the evolution of defense mechanisms We are eager to discover origins mechanisms and adaptive specializations of immunocompetence because the very existence of individuals and entire species is involved in a most essential way Second is the strong biomedical interest in adaptive immune mechanisms to increase understanding of health and disease in man If man and placental mammals represent the quintessence of immunoresponsiveness with complex interdependent pathways the less elaborate but fully functional systems of immunity in lower animals proffer insights applicable to immediate concerns in medicine Recent approaches to organ transplantation immunotherapy of cancer and repair of immunodeficiency diseases to name just a few areas have depended greatly on phylogenetic perspectives In a larger sense intelligent wildlife conservation utilization of food resources and adequate environmental protection all hinge on knowing how diverse species survive or otherwise succumb to insults injuries and disease The phylogenetic immunologist also seeks detailed information on the structure of the immunoglobulins which relates directly to the evolutionary history of living animals Perhaps genetic mechanisms responsible for the evolution of these proteins may be revealed as spin off information The vast number of immunoglobulin specificities and effector structures coupled with the remarkable phylogenetic conservation of certain polypeptide regions makes these molecules especially useful to protein chemists as well as immunologists Lipids, Lipoproteins, and Drugs David
