Decisions to Have Children in Late 20th and Early 21st Century Australia Gordon Carmichael, 2013-01-25 This book explores the process of decision making around having children in a sample of 115 men women and couples for whom family formation was a recent past current or imminent future issue The discussion is initially focused on the extent to which parenthood was contemplated in late adolescence and during the relationship formation courtship process and the process by which family sizes are determined Decision making associated with having first second third and fourth children is then

examined in chapters entitled The First Child The Obligatory Second Child The Discretionary Third Child and Fourth Children Negative Reactions Practical Issues Decisions to Have Children in Late 20th and Early 21st Century Australia offers a detailed coverage of a topic with resonances and implications that apply to contemporary cultures all around the world

Encyclopedia of Human Development Neil J. Salkind, 2006 Publisher description Misconceiving Mothers Laura E. Gómez, 1997 A tiny African American baby lies in a hospital incubator tubes protruding from his nostrils head and limbs He couldn't take the hit the caption warns If you're pregnant don't take drugs Ten years earlier this billboard would have been largely unintelligible to many of us But when it appeared in 1991 it immediately conjured up several powerful images the helpless infant himself his unseen environment a newborn intensive care unit filled with babies crying inconsolably and the mother who did this crack addicted and unrepentant Misconceiving Mothers is a case study of how public policy about reproduction and crime is made Laura E. Gómez uses secondary research and first hand interviews with legislators and prosecutors to examine attitudes toward the criminalization and or medicalization of drug use during pregnancy by the legislature and criminal justice system in California She traces how an initial tendency toward criminalization gave way to a trend toward seeing the problem of crack babies as an issue of social welfare and public health It is no surprise that in an atmosphere of mother blaming particularly targeted at poor women and women of color crack babies so easily captured the American popular imagination in the late 1980s What is surprising is the way prenatal drug exposure came to be institutionalized in the state apparatus Gómez attributes this circumstance to four interrelated causes the gendered nature of the social problem the recasting of the problem as fundamentally medical rather than criminal the dynamic nature of the process of institutionalization and the specific features of the legal institutions that is the legislature and prosecutors offices that became prominent in the case At one level Misconceiving Mother tells the story of a particular problem at a particular time and place how the California legislature and district attorneys grappled with pregnant women's drug use in the late 1980s and early 1990s At another level the book tells a more general story about the political nature of contemporary social problems The story it tells is political not just because it deals with the character of political institutions but because the process itself and the nature of the claims making concern the power to control the allocation of state resources A number of studies have looked at how the initial criminalization of social problems takes place Misconceiving Mothers looks at the process by which a criminalized social problem is institutionalized through the attitudes and policies of elite decision makers Author note Laura E. Gómez is Acting Professor of Law and Sociology University of California Los Angeles Politics and the Human Body Jean Bethke Elshtain, J. Timothy Cloyd, 1995 Who or what determines the right to die Do advancing reproductive technologies change reproductive rights What forces influence cultural standards of beauty How do discipline punishment and torture reflect our attitudes about the human body In this challenging new book Jean Bethke Elshtain a nationally recognized scholar in political science and philosophy and J. Timothy Cloyd a strong new voice in social and political science have assembled a collection of thought provoking essays on these issues written by some of the finest minds of our day Pregnancy and Birth Keisha L.
