English, Colonial, Modern and Maori Anna Crichton, 2014-11-24 How and why do works make their way into a public art collection Who decides what will be hung on the walls placed on plinths displayed in cases These important but seldom discussed questions lie at the heart of this cultural biography of the 70 years during which the Robert McDougall Art Gallery was Christchurch's civic art gallery The book explains how the collection came together how it developed and how the public and artists and critics reacted to it The book is presented in three parts each of which has its own introduction It provides an analytical framework in detail and in context by defining terms and explaining particular recurrent concepts These include and indeed highlight selection and presentation cultures derived from the core museological functions of collection and display These together with the framework's other concepts are related to mainstream methodology in the social sciences particularly political science The latter is especially relevant to the study of a public art gallery owned and funded by the public and its elected representatives and controlled by these representatives and their appointed agents Furthermore the framework explores the concept of post colonial tensions between heritages specifically indigenous transplanted and autochthonous ones The significance of this becomes more apparent when the concepts used in relevant previous studies of specific public art galleries in New Zealand are reviewed There is also a strong emphasis on the development of a public Maori art collection It is a story too of vivid and influential personalities the directors and curators who fought for the gallery and the artists represented in it But the book is more than just the story of a single gallery's collection it shines a light on concerns and patterns that will be familiar to galleries everywhere and provides a unique perspective on New Zealand's cultural development over much of the twentieth century

Library of Congress Subject Headings Library of Congress. Cataloging Policy and Support Office,2009 Don Binney Damian Skinner,D. H. Binney,2003 This is a simple and straightforward book on the painter Don Binney who has been working with images of birds and landscapes since the early 1960s Though he is a well known and popular artist nothing has previously been written on him and this attractive and useful book will be of considerable interest The Spirit of Colin McCahon Zoe Alderton,2015-02-27 The Spirit of Colin McCahon provides a vivid historical contextualisation of New Zealand s premier modern artist clearly explaining his esoteric religious themes and symbols Via a framework of visual rhetoric this book explores the social factors that formed McCahon s religious and environmental beliefs and justifications as to why his audience often missed the intended point of spiritual his discourse or chose to ignore it The Spirit of Colin McCahon tracks the intricate process by which the artist s body of work turned from optimism to misery and explains the many communicative techniques he employed in order to arrest suspicion towards his Christian prophecy More broadly The Spirit of Colin McCahon outlines a model of analysis for the intersection of art and religion and the place of images as rhetorical devices within Antipodean culture The emerging field of religion and visual culture is important not only to students of New Zealand art history but also to a growing field of appreciation for the communicative power of images This book provides a helpful model for examining art and literature as social and religious tools and advances the importance of visual rhetoric within studies of art and social expression     Facing the Music Joanna Woods, 2008 An entertaining and lively biography of the founder and editor of the Triad New Zealand's first longstanding cultural magazine Founded in 1893 and running into the late 1920s the magazine offered well informed coverage of cultural activities in New Zealand Australia and internationally in a broad mix of critical and original writing Notoriously outspoken Baeyertz was feared and respected as a critic His music criticism was particularly intelligent and rigorous making no concessions to personality or amateur or professional status His later co editor the self styled decadent Frank Morton was equally candid This engaging biography of a fascinating man throws new light on a long neglected period of New Zealand's cultural past Publisher
