Abstract: Though a wide array of definitions and conceptualisations of critical thinking have been offered in the past, further elaboration on some concepts is required, particularly with respect to various factors that may impede an individual's application of critical thinking, such as in the case of reflective judgment. These barriers include varying levels of epistemological engagement or understanding, issues pertaining to heuristic-based thinking and intuitive judgment, as well as emotional and biased thinking. The aim of this review is to discuss such barriers and evaluate their impact on critical thinking in light of perspectives from research in an effort to reinforce the 'completeness' of extant critical thinking frameworks and to enhance the potential benefits of implementation in real-world settings. Recommendations and implications for overcoming such barriers are also discussed and evaluated.

Keywords: critical thinking; reflective judgment; epistemology; emotion; bias

1. Introduction

Critical thinking (CT) is a metacognitive process—consisting of a number of skills and dispositions—that, through purposeful, self-regulatory reflective judgment, increases the chances of producing a logical solution to a problem or a valid conclusion to an argument (Dwyer 2017, 2020; Dwyer et al. 2012, 2014, 2015, 2016; Dwyer and Walsh 2019; Quinn et al. 2020).

CT has long been identified as a desired outcome of education (Ibezaniilla et al. 2019; Butler et al. 2012; Dwyer 2017; Ennis 2018), given that it facilitates a more complex understanding of information (Dwyer et al. 2012; Halpern 2014), better judgment and decision-making (Gambrell 2006) and less dependence on cognitive bias and heuristic thinking (Facione and Facione 2001; McGuinness 2013). A vast body of research (e.g., Dwyer et al. 2012; Gadzella 1996; Hitchcock 2004; Reed and Kromrey 2001; Rimienė 2002; Solon 2007), including various meta-analyses (e.g., Abrami et al. 2008, 2015; Niu et al. 2013; Ortiz 2007), indicates that CT can be enhanced through targeted, explicit instruction. Though CT can be taught in domain-specific areas, its domain-general nature means that it can be taught across disciplines and in relation to real-world scenarios (Dwyer 2011, 2017; Dwyer and Eigenauer 2017; Dwyer et al. 2015; Gabennesch 2006; Halpern 2014). Indeed, the positive outcomes associated with CT transcend educational settings into real-world, everyday situations, which is important because CT is necessary for a variety of social and interpersonal contexts where good decision-making and problem-solving are needed on a daily basis (Ku 2009). However, regardless of domain-specificity or domain-general nature of instruction, the transferability of CT application has been an issue in CT research (e.g., see Dumitru 2012). This is an important consideration because issues with transferability—for example, in real-world settings—may imply something lacking in CT instruction.

In light of the large, aforementioned body of research focusing on enhancing CT through instruction, a growing body of research has also evaluated the manner in which

Conducting Multiple Site Evaluations in Real World Settings:

Conducting Multiple Site Evaluations in Real-World Settings James M. Herrell, 2002-07-22 In the past decade interest in multisite evaluation has grown but there is still not a substantial literature on the issues involved in conducting evaluations in multiple sites There are however a number of threads that readers may be interested in pursuing The literature on clinical trials increasingly contains references to conducting multicenter clinical trials Cluster evaluation is an approach to multisite evaluation that has been developed by the W K Kellogg Foundation for improving the evaluation of certain foundation initiatives The studies described in this volume represent an approach to multisite evaluation that has much in common with the clinical trials tradition However it shares with cluster evaluation an appreciation for the adjustments that are necessary to reflect the realities of conducting evaluation research in actual service settings This is the 94th issue of the quarterly report New Directions for Evaluation

Leeuw, Tom Ling, 2017-09-08 Knowledge grows as ideas are tested against each other Agreement is not resolved simply by naming concepts but in the dialectical process of thesis antithesis and synthesis There are many echoes of these debates in The Evidence Book The contributors make claims for both practitioner wisdom and the voice of experience Against this is posed the authority of experimental science and the randomized controlled trial The contributors are concerned in their own ways with collecting ranking and analyzing evidence and using this to deliver evaluations As an expert group they are aware that the concept of evidence has been increasingly important in the last decade As with other concepts it too often escapes precise definition Despite this the growing importance of evidence has been advocated with enthusiasm by supporters who see it as a way of increasing the effectiveness and quality of decisions and of professional life

The willingness to engage in evidence based policy and the means to do so is heavily constrained by economic political and cultural climates This book is a marvelously comprehensive and utterly unique treatise on evidence based policy It is a wide ranging contribution to the field of evaluation Improving Evaluation of Anticrime Programs National Research Council,Division of Behavioral and Social Sciences and Education,Committee on Law and Justice,Committee on Improving Evaluation of Anti-Crime Programs,2005-09-05 Although billions of dollars have been spent on crime prevention and control programs during the past decade scientifically strong impact evaluations of these programs are uncommon in the context of the overall number of programs that have received funding Improving Evaluation of Anticrime Programs is designed as a working guide for agencies and organizations responsible for program evaluation for researchers who must design scientifically credible evaluations of government and privately sponsored programs and for policy officials who are investing more and more in the concept of evidence based policy to guide their decisions in crucial areas of crime prevention and control

Accountability Work Marie-Louise Bemelmans-Videc,Jeremy Lonsdale,Burt Perrin,2017-12-02 Like honesty and clean water accountability is invariably seen as a good thing Conversely the absence of accountability is associated with most of the greatest abuses in human history Accountability is thus closely linked with the exercise of power and the legitimacy of policies and those pursuing them This book looks at the role of evaluation and of audit as key elements in democratic accountability processes The contributors explore the apparent paradox of there being more accountability related activities today than ever before at the same time as much public debate laments what is seen as a lack of actual accountability. Such a situation raises a number of questions: Is there a need for different approaches to establishing accountability or can current arrangements be modified to make them more effective? Are present practices part of the problem and are they preventing a mature debate about performance improvement taking place? How can systems awash with performance information ensure that at least some of it makes sense to a wide range of potential users? How is it that greater accountability and transparency can so quickly have become associated with concerns about perverse incentives and be seen by some as a costly burden? The volume includes detailed case studies and synthesizes up to date research evidence drawn from very different governmental systems ending with practical advice for those involved in the accountability processes. In doing so it attempts to address both conceptual ambiguities about the notion of accountability and the practical uncertainties over its implications for democratic government. This book is aimed at serious people who think about trends in the use of evaluation and audit in seeking to hold governments accountable for their actions and performance.
