cal. .58, made by Bilharz, Hall & Co." of wood, together with ten packing crates for them." Production of the Bilharz, Hall & Co. muzzleloading carbines continued through the summer of 1863. However, the company was having difficulty getting the parts needed. On 19 September the company initially requested from Captain Hutter 300 musket cones (percussion nipples; the quantity subsequently was reduced to 100), emery cloth, and steel in sizes (fifty pounds of two-inch square bar stock reduced to ten pounds), and fifty pounds of $\frac{1}{8}$ -inch to $\frac{1}{4}$ -inch stock (later eliminated). The company closed the request with the statement that "We will pay the prices as the Department may set & which you can charge us with on our account for the same. We want the articles asked for to manufacture the muzzle loading Carbine as per contract." This request was followed by another in October for 200 additional musket cones, and again for fifty pounds of two-inch square and the same amount of $\frac{1}{8}$ -inch to $\frac{1}{4}$ -inch square steel."

Captain Hutter provided another interesting insight to the status of the firm's contract on the 29th of October 1863. On that date he addressed the Confederate Chief of Ordnance, Colonel Josiah Gorgas, directly, stating,

As the contract of Bilharz, Hall & Co. will expire on the 7th day of December next, they will doubtless be willing to sell the greater part of their machinery.

I think it would be highly desirable for the Department to take a part of it at least. I need some machines that they have, and other arsenals will probably need such as would not be required at this place."

On the first of November Colonel Gorgas gave Captain Hutter permission to hire a machinist to appraise those items Hutter thought appropriate to purchase for the Danville Carbine Manufactory. On

The Best Gun in the World Robert S. Seigler, 2017-10-31 A thoroughly researched account of weapons innovation and industrialization in South Carolina during the Civil War and the man who made it happen. A year after seceding from the Union, South Carolina and the Confederate States government faced the daunting challenge of equipping soldiers with weapons, ammunition, and other military implements during the American Civil War. In The Best Gun in the World, Robert S. Seigler explains how South Carolina created its own armory and then enlisted the help of a weapons technology inventor to meet the demand. Seigler mined state and federal factory records, national and state archives, and US patents for detailed information on weapons production, the salaries and status of free and enslaved employees, and other financial records to reveal an interesting, distinctive story of technological innovation and industrialization in South Carolina. George Woodward Morse, originally from New Hampshire, was a machinist and firearms innovator who settled in Louisiana in the 1840s. He invented a reliable breechloading firearm in the mid 1850s to replace muzzleloaders that were ubiquitous throughout the world. Essential to the successful operation of any breechloader was its ammunition, and Morse perfected the first metallic center fire, pre-primed cartridge. His most notable contribution to the development of modern firearms. The US War Department tested Morse rifles and cartridges prior to the beginning of the Civil War and contracted with the inventor to produce the weapons at Harpers Ferry Armory. However, when the war began, Morse, a slave-holding plantation owner, determined that he could sell more of his guns in the South. The South Carolina State Military Works, originally designed to cast cannon, produced Morse's carbine and modified muskets, brass cartridges, cartridge boxes, and other military accoutrements. The armory ultimately produced only about 1,350 Morse firearms. For the next twenty years Morse sought to regain his legacy as the inventor of the center fire brass cartridges that are today standard ammunition for military and sporting firearms Does justice to one of the greatest stories in American firearms history If George Woodward Morse had not sided with the Confederacy his name might be as famous today as Colt or Winchester Gordon L Jones Atlanta History Center Excellent and well researched Patrick McCawley South Carolina Department of Archives and History For connoisseurs and scholars of military history especially Civil War history of technology or Southern South Carolina history this is a must read and reference volume pertaining to a previously little known aspect of the nineteenth century that had a far reaching impact in the manner wars would be fought by soldiers decades later Barry L Stiefel College of Charleston Athens Emily Jean Doster,Gary L. Doster,2011 When the University of Georgia was founded in 1801 the city of Athens did not yet exist The school s first classes were held under the trees and Athens grew up around the school As the university and Athens expanded the town became the economic and cultural center of a large section of northeast Georgia and many beautiful homes and other buildings were built Fortunately Athens was not in the path of Yankee general William T Sherman s army when they sacked and burned a 30 to 60 mile wide swath through Georgia between Atlanta and Savannah during his infamous March to the Sea in 1864 Consequently several historic buildings still stand on the university s campus and many beautiful antebellum homes still grace Athens s streets avenues and boulevards
