Britain and the Narration of Travel in the Nineteenth Century Kate Hill, 2017-05-15 Interrogating the multiple ways in which travel was narrated and mediated by and in response to nineteenth century British travelers this interdisciplinary collection examines to what extent these accounts drew on and developed existing tropes of travel The three sections take up personal and intimate narratives that were not necessarily designed for public consumption tales intended for a popular audience and accounts that were more clearly linked with discourses and institutions of power such as imperial processes of conquest and governance Some narratives focus on the things the travelers carried such as souvenirs from the battlefields of Britain s imperial wars while others show the complexity of Victorian dreams of the exotic Still others offer a disapproving glimpse of Victorian mores through the eyes of indigenous peoples in contrast to the imperialist vision of British explorers Swiss hotel registers guest books and guidebooks offer insights into the history of tourism while new photographic technologies the development of the telegraph system and train travel transformed the visual audial and even the conjugal experience of travel The contributors attend to issues of gender and ethnicity in essays on women travelers South African travel narratives and accounts of China during the Opium Wars and analyze the influence of fictional travel narratives Taken together these essays show how these multiple narratives circulated cross fertilised and reacted to one another to produce new narratives new objects and new modes of travel

Imagining Otherwise Debra Gettelman,2024-08-13 From fan fiction to relatability the assessment of novels based on how easy it is to imagine the represented experiences the individual reader's imagination has become a determining part of the contemporary literary environment Literary studies has a long history of critical approaches from New Criticism to surface reading devoted to minimizing the associations and inventiveness that readers bring to a text Imagining Otherwise instead seeks to explain how we came to view fiction as available for imaginative appropriation in the first place Gettelman argues for the Victorian roots of the core modernist belief that readers complete an author's vision As novel readership expanded in the nineteenth century many Victorian writers became frustrated with readers formulaic expectations and sought to engage aesthetically with their readers' imaginations Gettelman argues that the elevation of the novel as a genre began when writers started to incorporate rather than exclude the common reader's daydreams and emotions into their work Taking a fresh look at works by Austen Dickens George Eliot and Trollope as well as some of their modernist successors Henry James Virginia Woolf and others Gettelman traces narrative techniques including direct address verb tense syntax and prose style that reflect Victorian authors' changing perceptions of and engagement with their readers

Habitation in German Modernism Meindert Peters, 2024 Joins a growing body of scholarship dealing with the productive relationship between literature and cognitive studies while also positing a new theory of modernism How do we habituate ourselves to environments that are not yet or no longer familiar What is at stake in adapting our behavior to new or changed situations The present study explores these questions by bringing German literature and thought of the early twentieth century a time of immense social and material change in Europe into dialogue with contemporary research in embodied cognition In six close readings of texts by Vicki Baum Walter Benjamin Alfred Döblin Martin Heidegger Georg Kaiser and Rainer Maria Rilke it brings into relief German modernism's concerns over how we adapt our behavior to environments that are new changed and or changing Rather than emphasizing the alienation and isolation that these texts investigate regarding the modern urban experience as much of the research on literary modernism has traditionally done Meindert Peters's book draws out the more dynamic moments of mastery responsiveness and cooperation that underpin habituation Moreover it extends these questions of habituation to the function of literature itself by showing how modernist forms invite engagement and participation Habitation in German Modernism not only joins a growing body of scholarship dealing with the productive relationship between literature and cognitive studies but also posits a new theory of modernism

Re-Thinking Europe, 2008-01-01 Re-Thinking Europe sets out to investigate the place of the idea of Europe in literature and comparative literary studies The essays in this collection turn to the past in which Europe became synonymous with a tradition of peace and tolerance beyond national borders and enter into a critical dialogue with the present in which Europe has increasingly become associated with a history of oppression and violence The different essays together demonstrate how the idea of Europe cannot be thought apart from the tension between the regional and the global between nationalism and pluralism and can therefore be re thought as an opportunity for an identity beyond national or ethnic borders Engaging contemporary discourses on hybrid postcolonial and transnational identity this volume shows how literature can function as both a vital tool to forge new identities and a power subversive of such attempts at identity formation Like Europe it is always marked by the tension between integration and resistance The book will be of interest to students and scholars of modern literature comparative literature and European studies as well as people concerned with cultural memory and the relation between literature and cultural identity
