Advances in Seed Priming Amitava Rakshit, Harikesh Bahadur Singh, 2018-06-07 Most crop plants grow in environments that are suboptimal which prevents the plants from attaining their full genetic potential for growth and reproduction Stress due to abiotic and biotic agents has a significant effect on world food production Annually an estimated 15% of global yields are lost but this figure belies far greater losses for specific food systems and the people whose existence is dependent upon them particularly in developing countries Current efforts to mitigate these losses are worryingly over reliant on the use of sophisticated and costly chemicals measures with substantial economic and environmental costs or on the development of efficient and smart crop varieties which can take decades. What we need is a broad range of safe, robust and equitable solutions for food producers. One under investigated approach is that of utilizing the crop plant's innate immune system to resist stress. More specifically, the innate immune system can be sensitized or primed to respond more quickly and strongly to protect the plant against stresses. However, a strategy of employing priming in combination with reduced pesticide use can enhance protection and help to meet commitments to reducing chemical inputs in agriculture. This book discusses in detail different segments of priming in addressing stress factors and traits to increase competitiveness against all odds. Adopting a holistic and systematic approach, it addresses priming to counter climate change related adverse effects coupled with pest and pathogen related stress on the productivity of crops, utilizing natural resources to reap sustainable environmental, economic and social benefits for potential productivity of crops, maintaining synergy between soil, water and plants in ways that mimic nature.

A Boy from Siklis Manjushree Thapa, 2009 In the last days of the monsoon in 2006, a helicopter crash in Nepal's eastern hills claimed some of the country's best, including the charismatic environmentalist Chandra Gurung. Starting with his birth as the son of the headman of the small village of Siklis, Manjushree Thapa follows the arc of his career as he achieved one democratic breakthrough after another in a conservation movement under royal patronage where the royal family expected environmentalists to pander to their every whim. Offering a historical view into Nepal's conservation movement as a whole, A Boy from Siklis is the portrait of one man of his times and of a nation made and unmade and made anew by its quest for democracy.

Trekking in Tibet Gary McCue, 1999 Bordered by the Himalaya on the south and the Karakoram on the west, Tibet offers trekkers an experience like no other. In this updated edition of Trekking in Tibet, McCue prepares us for a sojourn into this mystical, otherworldly land, presenting detailed discussions of pre-trip planning, the most rewarding treks, as well as an educational glimpse into the country's history and culture.
