Abstract. For increasing energy efficiency in the economic and social sectors, a number of important decisions have been made by the Government of Uzbekistan, aiming at adopting energy efficient and energy saving technologies, further development of renewable energy, and rational use of energy resources. The precast concrete industry is one of the largest energy consumers among other sectors of the national economy. At present, heat treatment is an integral and at the same time the longest process in the production of precast concrete. Despite some success, heat and moisture treatment has been and remains the longest technological redistribution of precast concrete production, taking 80-90% of the total time required for the manufacture of products. The article presents the results of studies of the influence of ambient temperature on the modes of heat and moisture treatment of concrete. Experimentally proved the effect of increasing the initial temperature of the concrete mixture on the modes of heat treatment of concrete in a hot climate. The method of assignment of modes of heat and moisture treatment of concrete, taking into account the temperature of the hot climate, is proposed. The proposed method allows to reduce the cost of energy resources by 20-22% for 5-6 months a year in a hot climate.

1 Introduction

The Republic of Uzbekistan has adopted a number of key decrees aimed at increasing energy efficiency in the economic and social sectors, introducing energy efficient and energy saving technologies, further developing renewable energy, and ensuring the rational use of energy resources.

The precast concrete industry is one of the largest energy consumers among other sectors of the national economy. At present, heat treatment is an integral and at the same time the longest process in the production of precast concrete.

Despite some success, heat and moisture treatment has been and remains the longest technological redistribution of precast concrete production, taking 80-90% of the total time required for the manufacture of products.

Currently, over 90% of factory production is subjected to steaming, and more than half of the total volume is produced according to the aggregate flow technology with heat treatment in pit steaming chambers.

The main advantage of steam heating is the ability to provide favorable moisture conditions for concrete hardening when the steam is in direct contact with the unformulated

Design Primer for Hot Climates Allan Konya, 2013-10-22 Design Primer for Hot Climates offers a discussion of architecture and planning for hot climates The hot tropical and sub tropical regions contain most of the world's population and it is here that the majority of new buildings will be built For this reason this book concentrates on these regions but serves only as a broad outline of the climatic environmental and technological conditions The book begins with a discussion of climatic elements climatic zones and comfort This is followed by separate chapters on climatic design regional hazards e g condensation lightning storms earthquakes etc that must be considered during the design stage and factors such as site accessibility materials selection water and labor supply and building regulations and standards This book is meant not only for designers from temperate climatic areas but also for those who live in these regions in the hope that they will be stimulated to re examine conditions which may have become over familiar to them Engineering Materials RK Rajput,2008 The book has been thoroughly revised Several new articles have been added specifically in chapters in mortar Concrete Paint Varnishes Distempers and Antitermite treatment to make the book to still more comprehensive and a useful unit for the students preparing for the examination in the subject

Use of Permeable Formwork in Placing and Curing Concrete
P. G. Malone,1999 Permeable framework is a special class of lined formwork used to produce improvements in the strength and durability of concrete The bracing and the liner in the formwork are engineered to resist the pressure of plastic or fresh concrete but to allow trapped air and excess water to pass through and be removed during concrete placement and consolidation The objective in using permeable formwork is to eliminate voids on the surface of the concrete bug holes and to increase the strength and durability of the concrete surface immediately behind the formwork A review of permeable formwork and its use in placing concrete was conducted Methods techniques and materials are discussed and example applications are described Benefits of using permeable formwork include a reduction in bug holes and surface defects improved resistance to freezing and thawing reduced rates of surface carbonation and chloride ion infiltration increased surface strength reduced form coating requirements reduced efforts in curing and reduced surface preparation for coating The cost of using permeable formwork varies greatly among job sites However the cost of using permeable formwork will generally be double that for conventional impermeable formwork Cost savings can be realized in the extended life of any wooden formwork used behind the filter fabric the ability to proceed without applying form release compounds the decreased cost of final surface preparation if coatings are to be applied to the finished concrete and the increased service life of the finished concrete
