Condorcet's Paradox William V. Gehrlein, 2006-08-29 Condorcet's Paradox has been formally studied by an amazing number of people in many different contexts for more than two centuries Peter Fishburn introduced the basic notion of the Paradox to me in 1971 during a course in Social Choice Theory at Pennsylvania State University My immediate response to seeing the simple example that he presented was that this phenomenon certainly could not be very likely to ever be observed in reality Peter quickly suggested that I should work on developing some representations for the probability that the Paradox might occur and very soon thereafter that pursuit began It is only after 35 years of effort with a lot of help from Peter that I now feel that a good answer can be given to the challenge that was presented in that classroom in 1971 Many people have suggested to me over the years that a book like this should be completed since the source material is spread over such a wide variety of disciplines of academic journals and books that it is very difficult for people to know what has been done and has not been done in this area of determining representations for the probability that Condorcet's Paradox would ever be observed in reality Empirical Studies in Comparative Politics Melvin J. Hinich, Michael C. Munger, 2013-06-29 Empirical Studies in Comparative Politics presents a collection of papers analyzing the political systems of ten nations It intends to provoke a conscious effort to compare and investigate the public choice of comparative politics There have been many publications by public choice scholars and many more by researchers who are at least sympathetic to the public choice perspective yet little of this work has been integrated into the main stream of comparative political science literature This work however presents an empirically oriented study of the politics bureaucratic organization and regulated economies of particular nations in the canon of the comparativist It therefore provides a public choice view at the level of nations not of systems This compendium of work on comparative politics meets two criteria In every case a model of human behavior or institutional impact is specified Also in every case this model is confronted with data appropriate for evaluating whether this model is useful for understanding politics in one or more nations
