Aging, Carcinogenesis, and Radiation Biology Kendric C. Smith, 1976 Aging, Carcinogenesis, and Radiation Biology Kendric Smith, 2013-03-09 The covalent attachment to deoxyribonucleic acid in vivo of a large number of different types of chemical compounds both normal cellular constituents such as proteins and amino acids and also exogenous compounds such as drugs carcinogens etc have been shown to exert profound effects upon cells Four research activities formerly considered to be totally independent relate to this problem of nucleic acid adducts 1 normal covalent attachment of DNA to membranes protein linkers in chromosomes etc 2 the roles of radiation and chemical enhancement of DNA adduct formation in cell killing and mutagenesis A related field is the use of known cross linking reactions to gain information on structural associations in macromolecular complexes 3 the relevance of DNA adducts to chemical and radiation carcinogenesis 4 the relevance of DNA adducts to the cross linking theory of cellular aging 1 There are numerous examples of normal linkages between DNA and protein e g DNA membrane attachment sites protein linkers in chromosomes amino acids covalently linked to DNA as a function of growth conditions and gene regulation by non covalently bound proteins A summary of data on natural adducts to DNA thus serves to introduce the subject of the radiation and chemical enhancement of DNA adduct formation 2 In the past radiation biology has been concerned mainly with trying to understand the radiation chemistry of purified DNA and the biological effects and repair of these radiation induced alterations when produced in cellular DNA Aging,

This Conference on biomedical applications of lasers Ias organized by the Quantum Electronics Divisional Board of the European Physical Society E P S and held at the Villa of Poggio Imperiale in Florence September 3 6 1979 As kno m laser surgery especially microsurgery and endoscopic photo coagulation has recently made important progress and the field is expand i ng rapidly Very significant applications of lasers have also been achieved in Bi ology during recent years cell microsurgery cell counting and sorting cytofluorimeter devices etc and the potential of laser techniques in this field is nO 1 sufficiently well establ ished A new class of applications of laserradijtion in Medicine has recently been made possible by important results obtained with low intensity non coagulative visible lasers such as photodynamic therapy of tumors At the same time important branches of Medicine where light effects are studied and optical techniques are presently used for a certain number of clinical applications such as dermatology and pediatry appear to be still in their infancy as far as the proper use of optical radiation and techniques and the understanding of fundamental photoinduced biological processes are concerned Moreover laser photobiology appears a very promising field for the investigation of fundamental processes at the biomolecular level
