How to Do Things with Tense and Aspect Matejka Grgic, Igor Z. Žagar, 2020-05-15 Almost all verbs in Slovene one of the least researched Slavic languages have two aspectually different forms the perfective PF and the imperfective IF But in institutional settings or settings strongly marked with social hierarchy only the second the imperfective form is used by Slovene speakers in a performative sense Why is that And what in fact has a Slovene speaker said if s he has used the imperfective verb in performative circumstances No doubt that s he may be in the process of accomplishing such an act But at the same time having the possibility of choosing between the PF and the IF form s he may have also indicated that this act hasn t been accomplished yet as long as we are only promising IF we have not really promised anything yet and if we are only promising IF we cannot take anything as having been really promised That was how Stanislav krabec the 19th century Slovene linguist and the central figure of this book saw the role of verbal aspect within language use Being caught in such a dilemma a question inevitably arises how do we accomplish an act of promise or any other performative act in Slovene That dilemma whether to use the perfective or imperfective aspect when accomplishing performative acts may seem more than artificial at first but it was very much alive among Slovene linguists at the end of the 19th century And it was that very dilemma that quite unexpectedly gave rise to the foundations of performativity in Slovene half a century before Austin In the present book the authors try to shed light on this controversy that involved different Slovene scholars for about thirty years and propose a delocutive hypothesis as a solution for the performative dilemma this controversy unveiled

Veselinova, 2006 This book examines stem change in verb paradigms as in English go go PRESENT vs went go PAST a phenomenon referred to as suppletion in current linguistic theory The work is based on a broad sample of 193 languages and examines this long neglected phenomenon from a typological perspective In addition to identifying types of suppletion which occur cross linguistically the study brings to light areal patterns of the occurrence of suppletive forms in verb paradigms Several hypotheses as regards the diachronic development of suppletive forms are presented as well The author also seeks to explore the methodological issues of evaluating the frequency of linguistic features in large language samples by introducing a method of weighting languages according to their genetic relatedness All figures obtained in this way are compared to the proportions yielded by more familiar counting methods and the results and implications of the different procedures are compared and discussed throughout

Semantics and Morphology of Early Adjectives in First Language Acquisition Sabrina Noccetti,Elena Tribushinina,Maria D. Voeikova,2015-09-18 This book is about how toddlers learn their first adjectives such as for example red big and tasty Adjectives denote properties and enter child vocabularies later than words for objects such as apple and tree and actions such as eat and run probably due to lower frequencies in parental speech and greater conceptual complexity Adjective acquisition has received relatively little attention in child language research Furthermore cross linguistic studies of adjective learning are virtually non existent This book represents the first systematic analysis of how children learning typologically different languages acquire adjective form function and meaning The cross linguistic comparisons undertaken in the book provide valuable insights into universal and language specific aspects of language acquisition For each of the languages studied in this volume the development of adjective semantics is studied in tandem with the development of morphology by testing two hypotheses a the acquisition trajectory in the domain of adjectival morphology is determined by the typological properties of the target language b irrespective of the languages being acquired adjective learning is facilitated by universal conceptual mechanisms such as comparison and contrast
