Forty-Five Years of Research at the NBRL, Boston, Massachusetts C. Robert Valeri, Esq Gina . Ragno Giorgio, 2013-08-28 In 1789 Horace Walpole defined serendipity as making discoveries by accident it was through acceptance of this inherent chaos that some of history's most influential advances were made such as Alfred Nobel and dynamite Marie Curie and radium and Alexander Fleming and penicillin Usually chaotic serendipitous observations are either not recognized by hypothesis driven researchers or if observed rejected by them Fortunately the Naval Blood Research Laboratory NBRL has been able to embrace important chaotic and serendipitous observations that were critical to the productivity of the laboratory As former director of the NBRL C Robert Valeri MD spent forty five years exploring hematocrit bleeding time and nonsurgical blood loss as well as other blood related advances used to treat military and civilian personnel In this volume he reviews those advances and recalls his time at the NBRL Advances in Pharmacology ,1996-05-09 Each volume of Advances in Pharmacology provides a rich collection of reviews on timely topics Emphasis is placed on the molecular bases of drug action both applied and experimental Annual Review of Physiology James Murray Luck,Victor Ernest Hall,1994 Research Awards Index ,1987 Forthcoming Books Rose Army,1994-02 Research Grants Index National Institutes of Health (U.S.). McGuire,2013-11-11 Breast cancer continues to be a major problem In Volume 1 of this series we dealt exclusively with topics concerned with therapy In Volume 2 we explored various aspects of experimental biology which are critical to our developing better methods of diagnosis and treatment In the present volume we turn to a series of individual topics of considerable interest including systemic methods for hormonal ablation screening for early cancer male breast cancer and more The first chapter addresses the question of why some breast tumors metastasize and others do not Based on elegant animal tumor models Kim believes that metastasizing tumor cells are the undesirable by product of the host immune surveillance mechanism Unstable membrane structures lead to shedding of membrane constituents abnormal locomotive properties and evasion of the host defense system Factors which alter membrane structure will therefore have to be considered in our approach to the management of early breast cancer IBZ ,1982 Subject Guide to Books in Print ,1997 Books in Print ,1994
