

MY VISION OF THE SCHOOL LIBRARY / MEDIA CENTER

The school library/media center propels reading, engaged learning, research, and writing mastery. To make this happen, the librarian must be anchored in these beliefs:

- 1) "An open book" is the single best educational tool ever invented. The library showcases books (including most-books-read competitions and tie-ins with book awards), and provides a safe, welcoming environment conducive to reading.
- 2) The librarian is a teacher who actively supports classroom teachers -- with reading lists, bibliographies, Webquests, and books "pulled from the shelves" and set aside for special purposes. The librarian also partners with teachers to plan curriculum and ISAT preparation, and is a resource for helping to write grant applications.
- 3) The library can play a key role in preparing students to score better on ISATs and other tests. This is partly by presenting content covered in the tests, but can also be through workshops in "test-taking techniques" and "how to take and use notes."
- 4) It is a gateway to media resources (DVDs, CDs, audiobooks) and databases. It is the logical place to house the computer lab and teach responsible use of Internet resources.
- 5) The library can house any number of extracurricular activities, including a school's newspaper and clubs. It can host writing workshops, guest authors, even parent/student shared reading nights for the families of early elementary students.

These define how I plan to operate my library/media center to support students, teachers, and school district goals. They form the nucleus of "an operating manual," whose outline appears next, that I am writing to guide the way I organize and administer my library.
