ability to convey a specific musical identity as well as potential links between individuality and career defining outcomes such as critical recognition and aesthetic appraisal warrant further exploration Quantitative approaches to the study of music performance have benefited greatly from MIDI technology and the application of computational methods leading to the flourishing of empirical music performance research over the last few decades More recently neuroimaging techniques have provided valuable insights into the neural mechanisms involved in the cognitive processes of performing music Nevertheless this field continues to benefit greatly from qualitative approaches given that the communication of affect and identity cues in music performance leads to a rich subjectivity of impressions that must be accounted for in order to lead to a greater understanding of this multifaceted phenomenon The aim of this Research Topic is to provide a forum for interdisciplinary research broadly related to the expression and perception of individuality in music performance Research methodology includes behavioral psychophysiological and neuroimaging techniques Both quantitative and qualitative approaches are presented The scope of this Research Topic includes laboratory studies as well as studies in real life performance settings and longitudinal studies on performers
