The Sad Story of Burton, Speke, and the Nile; or, Was John Hanning Speke a Cad? W. B. Carnochan,2006 This is a study of the famous controversy between Richard Burton and John Hanning Speke fellow explorers who quarreled over Speke s claim to have discovered the source of the Nile during their African expedition in 1857 59 Speke died of a gunshot wound probably accidental the day before a scheduled debate with Burton in 1864 Burton has had the upper hand in subsequent accounts Speke has been called a cad In light of new evidence and after a careful reading of duelling texts Carnochan concludes that the case against Speke remains unproven and that the story as normally told displays the inescapable uncertainty of historical narrative All was fair in this love war

Visualizing Africa in Nineteenth-Century British Travel Accounts Leila Koivunen,2008-11-19 This study examines and explains how British explorers visualized the African interior in the latter part of the nineteenth century providing the first sustained analysis of the process by which this visual material was transformed into the illustrations in popular travel books At that time central Africa was effectively a blank canvas for Europeans unknown and devoid of visual representations While previous works have concentrated on exploring the stereotyped nature of printed imagery of Africa this study examines the actual production process of images and the books in which they were published in order to demonstrate how why and by whom the images were manipulated Thus the main focus of the work is not on the aesthetic value of pictures but in the activities interaction and situations that gave birth to them in both Africa and Europe

Paths Without Glory James L. Newman,2010 Few people have garnered so much enduring interest as Sir Richard Burton A true polymath Burton is best known today for his translations of the Kama Sutra and Arabian Nights Yet Africa stood at the center of his adult life The Burton Speke expedition 1856-59 that put Lake Tanganyika on the map led to years of controversy over the source of the White Nile. From 1861 to 1864 Burton served as British consul in Fernando Po and traveled widely between Ghana and Angola. He wrote prodigiously and contributed some of the first detailed ethnographic accounts of Africa's peoples. In many ways, however, Africa proved to be Burton's undoing. Injuries and sickness sapped his strength; he made enemies in high places; and ironically, even the discovery of Lake Tanganyika worked to his disadvantage. Increasingly frustrated and bitter, he turned to alcohol as a frequent remedy. In this fascinating story of the relationship between a man and a continent, geographer James L. Newman provides an intimate portrait of Burton through careful examination of his journals and biographers' rich analyses. Delving deepest into Burton's later life and travels, Newman pinpoints the thematic mainstays of his career as a diplomat and explorer: namely, his strong advocacy of aggressive imperial policies and his belief that race explained crucial human differences. Historians and scholars of the golden age of empire, as well as armchair adventurers, will not only discover what defined this famously enigmatic figure but venture themselves into the heart of mid-nineteenth-century Africa.
