Consulting Profession In Developing Countries A Strategy For Development:

The consulting profession in developing countries : a strategy for development Syed S. Kirmani, Warren C. Baum, 1991 The authors concluded that during the past two decades the number of domestic consulting firms in developing countries has increased phenomenally However the quality of their performance has not kept pace with the growth in numbers The policies and practices of government internal weaknesses in staffing and management and the lack of a supportive environment have prevented domestic consulting firms from effectively exercising the key role that they should in planning designing and implementing their countries investment programs The authors also point out that favorable opportunities for growth of the consulting profession exist but a number of constraints will have to be overcome for those to be realized The profession generally suffers from several structural weaknesses It is characterized by a small number of large firms mostly public enterprises which dominate the business and at the other end of the scale a very large number of small or medium size private firms often in a precarious position The recommended strategy for strengthening the domestic consulting is addressed to both the developing countries and the World Bank and other donors

New Perspectives on Construction in Developing Countries George Ofori, 2012-06-26 Developing countries face the challenge of maintaining economic growth and socio economic development at the core of which sits the construction industry Considerable research on construction in developing countries took place in the 1970 s and 1980 s but little since a gap which this book fills Including contributions from prominent academics and practitioners in Australia China the Netherlands Portugal Singapore South Africa Switzerland and the UK this is a truly international analysis of a subject of global interest The most insightful and relevant of recent research on topics such as Millennium Development Goals the informal construction sector human resource development technology finance and social change are all addressed in the context of the construction industry in the developing world Also considered are other key aspects of construction industry development such as institution building nurturing of contractors and consultants and championing of industry development programmes While the challenge has grown and the needs have become even more pressing the research to date has rarely presented effective solutions Focussing on those aspects of the construction industry most crucial to development this is a much needed up to date study that sheds new light on a variety of concepts and issues This is essential reading for researchers professionals and students interested in the construction industry in developing countries Readers of this book will be interested in its companion volume Contemporary Issues of Construction in Developing Countries

Policies and Measures for Small-contractor Development in the Construction Industry, 1996 Participatory Development and the World Bank Bhuvan Bhatnagar, Aubrey C. Williams, 1992-01-01 Participatory development is an end and a means It is an end because participation builds skills and enhances people s capacity for action and for enriching their lives It is a means because participation contributes to better development policies and projects As a development agency the World Bank is primarily concerned with exploring how individuals communities and public and private institutions can contribute to making development prospects better and more lasting This report reflects the outcome of a workshop intended to explore some difficult issues such as whether the Bank is approaching the idea of participation in the right way how and to what extent external agencies can encourage participatory development This book is a guide to the learning process The main messages of the introductory chapter reflect further thinking of the learning groups since the workshop

The World Bank in a Changing World Ibrahim F.I. Shihata, James D. Wolfensohn, 2023-12-18 Civil Service Reform and the World Bank Barbara Nunberg, John R. Nellis, 1995-01-01 Annotation Surveys the World Bank s experience in supporting developing country civil service reforms and begins to assess the progress made The World Bank recognizes the importance of the civil service to the general welfare of the 4 6 billion people in low and middle income countries Between 1981 and 1991 civil service reform was a prominent feature of 90 World Bank lending operations This paper surveys the Bank s experience in supporting this reform and assesses the progress made The lending operations concentrated on two separate dimensions 1 Shorter term emergency steps to reform public pay and employment policies which center on measures to contain the cost and the size of the civil service 2 longer term civil service strengthening efforts directed toward ongoing sustained management improvements After examining the record of these reforms the authors conclude that the results have been mixed at best They recommend greater emphasis on devising a coherent far reaching strategy for reform and on detailing the set of tactics by which these goals will be achieved

Korean Industrial Policy Danny M. Leipziger, Peter A. Petri, 1993 The World Bank is changing the way it does business in the energy sector This Policy Paper is one of two that outlines the Bank s new policies for the sector The review was prompted by concern about the effects of power generation on the environment and on populations that may be resettled to make way for projects Another stimulus was the macroeconomic reality of fewer investment resources in many countries And many developing countries are becoming more receptive to reforming the way energy is produced and consumed This paper credits the public monopoly approach of the last 30 years with facilitating expansion of power supplies capturing technical economies of scale and making effective use of scarce managerial and technical skills Nonetheless it recommends several new policies to improve the performance of the electric power sector in developing countries These reforms will guide future Bank activities in the sector Bank loans for electric power will go first to countries clearly committed to improving the performance of their power sectors The Bank will also discourage subsidies on energy prices and will encourage private investment in utilities And it will provide financing to help the least developed countries import power where local generation is not practical The efficiency of production and use of electric power in developing countries is examined in a companion paper Energy Efficiency and Conservation in the Developing World The World Bank's Role The World Bank's Role in the Electric Power Sector is also available in Spanish La función del Banco Mundial en el sector de la electricidad Políticas para efectuar una reforma institucional regulatoria y financiera eficaz ISBN 0 8213 2451 9 Stock No 12451 7 95 Price code 007 Spanis

Subbarao, Laura Raney, 1993-01-01 This paper on the social gains from female education is part of a series prepared by the World Bank on the benefits of improving opportunities for women The paper suggests that expanding women's opportunities enhances their productivity and earning potential and thus contributes to better economic performance and poverty alleviation Education raises the productivity and earnings of both men and women Over time female education also contributes to slower population growth and healthier families The Bank believes that in efforts to expand women's opportunities priority should be given to education through the secondary level reproductive health agriculture private entrepreneurship and the wage labor force This paper is concerned with the estimation of these social gains from female education at the secondary level The paper examines the role of female education measured by gross enrollment rates at the secondary level relative to and or in combination with some health and family planning services that influence fertility and infant mortality It uses reduced form estimation of the total fertility rate and infant mortality rate The paper presents cross country regressions based on data drawn from 72 developing countries The analysis in this paper generally shows that female secondary education family planning and health programs all affect fertility and mortality and the effect of female secondary education appears to be very strong Results suggest that family planning will reduce fertility more when combined with female education especially in countries that now have low female secondary enrollment levels DK
