Monetary and Capital Markets Department, 2019-10-16 The October 2019 Global Financial Stability Report GFSR identifies the current key vulnerabilities in the global financial system as the rise in corporate debt burdens increasing holdings of riskier and more illiquid assets by institutional investors and growing reliance on external borrowing by emerging and frontier market economies The report proposes that policymakers mitigate these risks through stricter supervisory and macroprudential oversight of firms strengthened oversight and disclosure for institutional investors and the implementation of prudent sovereign debt management practices and frameworks for emerging and frontier market economies Green

Bond Pricing and Greenwashing Under Asymmetric Information Jochen M. Schmittmann, Yun Gao, 2022-12-09 We analyze the corporate green bond market under a rational framework without an innate green preference using a simple adverse selection model Firms can use green bonds to signal their green credentials to investors Transition risk stems from uncertainty over the introduction of carbon pricing We show that green bonds have a price premium over conventional bonds when there are information asymmetry transition risk and it is costly to engage in greenwashing that is false or exaggerated claims of being green The extent of greenwashing in the market is a function of the green bond premium A swift and gradual implementation of carbon pricing generates a small green bond premium and a low level of greenwashing while delayed and large carbon pricing has an ambiguous effect on both The model provides a rich set of policy implications notably the need for swift action on carbon pricing and strong information disclosures and regulations to ensure the integrity of green bonds
