T. Smith, 2003-07-10 This is no fairy tale It's all fantastic and bizarre and true It's my life a raspy song that sounds better if you sing along The men and women who live and work near Opelika Alabama gather at the Hollow Log Lounge There under the watchful eye of the stuffed fox behind the bar they unload their gripes and worries tell their stories argue joke commune complain and confess In this collection of poems R T Smith paints a vividly imagined portrait of the community in this small town bar capturing the chorus of the patrons voices echoing off the knotted wood paneled walls Smith's stand in Sam Buckhannon scribbles stories heard and overheard as tongues loosened by liquor spin out monologues in which southern idiom and vernacular seem perfectly at home within the constraints of measured verse The Invention of Secrecy David Citino, 2001 In The Invention of Secrecy his eleventh collection of poetry David Citino searches near and far in his native Ohio illuminated suddenly by a cosmic messenger in Italy and Egypt ancient and new in Tibet even in prehistoric and preliterate times seeking answers to the most human questions What did we reverence in the past What are our present obsessions What does it mean to read one another Must we always speak in our parents voices The underlying concern of these poems is the very notion of secrecy and in his explorations Citino investigates the lives and credentials of our saints both secular and otherworldly Ramses the Great the prophet Hosea the Roman emperor Vespasian Caravaggio the Wicked Witch of the West Padre Pio Mario Lanza and Princess Diana are among the larger than life personages materializing on these pages

Continually in these poems the past is read by light of the present and the present from perspectives of the past Accessible yet ambitious and treating all of history as the concern of those living today these poems seek to measure the span of our lives and the distance that separates one life from another
