

The intergenerational communications checklist

By ensuring that internal communications are accessible to employees of all generations, you can create a richer, more inclusive, and better-connected employee experience.

Here are 10 essential tips to help bridge generational gaps and enhance communication within your organization:

1. Use multichannel communications

Different generations have varying preferences for communication. Offer a mix of communication channels, including email, intranet, mobile, digital signage, and your company's chosen chat platform.

2. Adjust tone appropriately

While Gen Z may expect informal messages, other generations may be used to a more formal tone in internal communications. This can be easy to misread.
