Record of British and Foreign Literature , 1865 The Greeks and the New Armand D'Angour, 2011-09-15 The Greeks have long been regarded as innovators across a wide range of fields in literature culture philosophy politics and science However little attention has been paid to how they thought and felt about novelty and innovation itself and to relating this to the forces of traditionalism and conservatism which were also present across all the various societies within ancient Greece What inspired the Greeks to embark on their unique and enduring innovations How did they think and feel about the new This book represents the first serious attempt to address these issues and deals with the phenomenon across all periods and areas of classical Greek history and thought Each chapter concentrates on a different area of culture or thought while the book as a whole argues that much of the impulse towards innovation came from the life of the polis which provided its setting

Systems Biomedicine Edison T. Liu, Douglas A. Lauffenburger, 2009-09-17 Systems biology is a critical emerging field that quantifies and annotates the complexity of biological systems in order to construct algorithmic models to predict outcomes from component input Applications in medicine are revolutionizing our understanding of biological processes and systems Systems Biomedicine is organized around foundations computational modeling network biology and integrative biology with the extension of examples from human biology and pharmacology to focus on the applications of systems approaches to medical problems An integrative approach to the underlying genomic proteomic and computational biology principles provides researchers with guidance in the use of qualitative systems and hypothesis generators To reflect the highly interdisciplinary nature of the field careful detail has been extended to ensure explanations of complex mathematical and biological principles are clear with minimum technical jargon Organized to reflect the important distinguishing characteristics of systems strategies in experimental biology and medicine Provides precise and comprehensive measurement tools for constructing a model of the system and tools for defining complexity as an experimental dependent variable Includes a thorough discussion of the applications of quantitative principles to biomedical problems

ZUM '98: The Z Formal Specification Notation Jonathan P. Bowen, Andreas Fett, Michael G. Hinchey, 1998-09-16 1 In a number of recent presentations most notably at FME 96 one of the foremost scientists in the field of formal methods C A R Hoare has highlighted the fact that formal methods are not the only technique for producing reliable software This seems to have caused some controversy not least amongst formal methods practitioners How can one of the founding fathers of formal methods seemingly denounce the field of research after over a quarter of a century of support This is a question that has been posed recently by some formal methods skeptics However Prof Hoare has not abandoned formal methods He is reiterating 2 albeit more radically his 1987 view that more than one tool and notation will be required in the practical industrial development of large scale complex computer systems and not all of these tools and notations will be or even need be formal in nature Formal methods are not a solution but rather one of a selection of techniques that have proven to be useful in the development of reliable complex systems and to result in hardware and software systems that can be produced on time and within a budget while satisfying the stated requirements After almost three decades the time has come to view formal methods in the context of overall industrial scale system development and their relationship to other techniques and methods We should no longer consider the issue of whether we are pro formal or anti formal but rather the degree of formality if any that we need to support in system development This is a goal of ZUM 98 the 11th International Conference of Z Users held for the first time within continental Europe in the city of Berlin Germany

Inhibition in the process of feature binding Snehlata Jaswal, Feature binding is the process whereby different features such as shape colour size orientation location etc are linked together to form a coherent representation of the object It is a ubiquitous physiological sequence and an essential phase in information processing for it provides the basis of mental representations which in turn are requisite for all cognitive functions It is important to realize though that binding is not an isolated process There are myriad stimuli impinging on our senses at all times vying to gain entry into our consciousness Further not only does sensory input emanate from a complex dynamic environment but it also enters a neural system that is already activated by previous inputs and is oriented towards future goals Which aspects of the momentary sensory input are selected for further processing depends as much on the state of the system as it does on the sensory input itself Indeed some fundamental questions one may ask about binding are whether why and how some features are selected for binding at the cost of others The bottom up view of information processing is that the input received by the brain is processed in a largely automatic way to the higher centers in the brain The physiological basis of binding is postulated to be either conjunctively coding neurons or synchrony among participating neural networks to encode features and out of phase neural activity to encode separate objects But mere perceptual integration of features whether by synchrony or by specialized neurons does not even begin to capture the implication that binding results in coherent objects fundamental for further information processing An object is not only a bundle of features At the very least the features need to be integrated so that the object can be distinguished from other objects This implies selection and manipulation of the basic information supplied by separate features The top down view of information processing contends that binding is more influenced by the reentrant processes the downward and lateral feedback to the lower areas emanating from the higher centers of the brain Reentrant processes not only help to confirm what is correct but also resolve competition These top down processes are linked to attention and higher cognitive functions help select relevant input We aim to debate what happens to the irrelevant information in the process of binding Are irrelevant features simply lost from the system over time or are they deliberately deleted Is there any inhibitory process involved in binding What is the empirical evidence for such a process at the behavioral level Is such a process active and resource demanding or relatively passive and automatic What do neuropsychological studies show What are the physiological underpinnings of such a process How is it incorporated in computational models to increase our understanding of the binding process The idea is to bring together diverse views on Inhibition in Feature Binding with the ultimate aim of better understanding the process of binding and invoking informed and insightful future research

Verification of Digital and Hybrid Systems M. Kemal Inan, Robert P. Kurshan, 2012-12-06

This book grew out of a NATO Advanced Study Institute summer school that was held in Antalya TURkey from 26 May to 6 June 1997

The purpose of the summer school was to expose recent advances in the formal verification of systems composed of both logical and continuous time components

The course was structured in two parts

The first part covered theorem proving system automaton models logics tools and complexity of verification

The second part covered modeling and verification of hybrid systems i e systems composed of a discrete event part and a continuous time part that interact with each other in novel ways

Along with advances in microelectronics methods to design and build logical systems have grown progressively complex

One way to tackle the problem of ensuring the error free operation of digital or hybrid systems is through the use of formal techniques

The exercise of comparing the formal specification of a logical system namely what it is supposed to do to its formal operational description what it actually does in an automated or semi automated manner is called verification

Verification can be performed in an after the fact manner meaning that after a system is already designed its specification and operational description are regenerated or modified if necessary to match the verification tool at hand and the consistency check is carried out
