Vitamins and Cancer Jr. Meyskens, Kedar N. Prasad, 2012-12-06 In the past five years a surprising and intense resurgence in interest in vitamins and other micronutrients and their role in health and disease has occurred The recognition has emerged that vitamins not only are essential for life in that severe nutritional deficiencies occur in their absence but that these compounds may also serve as natural inhibitors of cancer Synthetic alterations of the basic vitamin A molecule have also resulted in the production of compounds that are more potent as anticancer agents than the natural substance and may have substantial therapeutic activity as well Whether other vitamins can be changed or altered to produce a better anticancer effect than the native compound has been little explored to date but should be a fruitful pursuit for future study In our concluding remarks to the First International Conference in 1982 we speculated that rapid advances in our understanding of vitamins would occur in the next few years and that large scale intervention trials of vitamins as preventive agents in defined human populations would be started This anticipated generation of data on vitamins and their interactions has proceeded rapidly and the importance of interactions between vitamins and other micronutrients in the prevention setting has become better appreciated Currently more than 25 intervention trials with a variety of target populations using vitamins and other micronutrients have been started but it remains too early for meaningful analysis of the results to date
