Playing to Win Hilary Levey Friedman,2013-08-03 Many parents work more hours outside of the home and their lives are crowded with more obligations than ever before many children spend their evenings and weekends trying out for all star teams traveling to regional and national tournaments and eating dinner in the car while being shuttled between activities In this vivid ethnography based on almost 200 interviews with parents children coaches and teachers Hilary Levey probes the increase in children s participation in activities outside of the home structured and monitored by their parents when family time is so scarce As the parental second shift continues to grow alongside it a second shift for children has emerged especially among the middle and upper middle classes which is suffused with competition rather than mere participation What motivates these particular parents to get their children involved in competitive activities Parents primary concern is their children s access to high quality educational credentials the biggest bottleneck standing in the way of or facilitating entry into membership in the upper middle class Competitive activities like sports and the arts are seen as the essential proving ground that will clear their children's paths to the Ivy League or other similar institutions by helping them to develop a competitive habitus This belief motivated both by reality and by perception and shaped by gender and class affects how parents envision their children's futures it also shapes the structure of children's daily lives what the children themselves think about their lives and the competitive landscapes of the activities themselves

International Responses to Issues of Credit and Over-indebtedness in the Wake of Crisis Therese

Wilson,2016-04-22 This book explores the political economic and regulatory context in which credit regulation is taking place following the global financial crisis It suggests that current neoliberal economic policies favour multi national corporations rather than consumers and examines regulatory responses to the internationalization of consumer finance protection Detailing how EU consumers have been affected by national economic conditions the book also analyses the lending regimes of Europe Australia the US and South Africa and offers suggestions for responsible lending to avoid over indebtedness and corrupt mortgage lending Finally new approaches and directions for consumer credit regulations are outlined such as protection for small businesses protection against risky credit products reorganization of mortgage securitization and the possibility of a partnership model to address financial exclusion The book includes contributions from leading names in the field of consumer law and will be invaluable to those interested in banking business and commercial law Troepie: From

In Darwin's Wake John Campbell,1997 Skipper Campbell realized that his planned route along the South American coast and around Cape Horn would closely follow that taken by Charles Darwin on his historic journey aboard the BEAGLE He decided to compare his impressions of those places today with the descriptions and observations made by Darwin over 150 years earlier Wake up America Edward E. Mills,2021-10-13 This book will severely challenge every element of the consensus explanation for the Great Recession In fact a book like this although not necessarily this one is urgently needed to counter the massive disinformation spread by the Majority Report of the Financial Crisis Inquiry Commission that Congress created in 2009 to investigate the financial crisis of 2007-2009 that led to the Great Recession. Congress handed the Commission a list of 19 directives including the directive to examine the global imbalance of savings, international capital flows, and fiscal imbalances of various governments and monetary policy and the availability and terms of credit. The Commission chairman clearly steered the Commission toward the goal of shifting the blame for the financial crisis from government onto the backs of the private mortgage finance industry, consisting not only of banks but including mortgage bankers, insurance companies, and the mortgage giants popularly known as Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac. The Commission chairman specifically refused to consider any evidence linking the financial crisis and consequential Great Recession that struck the United States but impacted the global economy as well. This book has no agenda other than to present a complete factual history of the events, conditions, and policies that led to the Great Recession. The history will demonstrate that the seeds of the financial crisis were sown during the administration of George Washington and the economic theories spawned during the Great Depression. The overarching thesis is that the Global Financial Crisis and the resulting Global Recession was a perfect superstorm composed of the merger of separate storm systems: notably aggressive welfare activism, the Nation's affordable housing crusade, the zigs and zags of the Federal Reserve's monetary policies, and the 9 trillion trade deficit the U.S. accumulated between 1997 and 2007, which former Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke dubbed the Global Savings Glut, and others labeled the Global Dollar Glut. Flying Magazine, 1986-10 Ski, 2012 A NUTT IT TAKES A STONE TO CRACK KENNY ATTAWAY, 2024-10-20 Enthusiastic Black boys need their fathers. Mothers are extremely important, loved, and admired. But at the same time, we must never forget the vital and unforgettable role a father plays in his son's life, absent or present. For many Black boys, their fathers are their first authentic SUPERHERO. Focus on the Family with Dr. James C. Dobson, 1997 Forest and Stream, 1894 The American Road Katherine M. Johnson, 2021-06-23 In The American Road, Katherine M. Johnson develops a bold new theory for how the American highway system has taken on such outsized scale and complexity by emphasizing the emergence of a powerful administrative apparatus in the American federal system. Established in 1914 expressly to intervene in the congressional debates of the era, the American highway bureaucracy consisted of forty-eight state highway officials acting in and through their self-organized association, the American Association of State Highway Officials. Johnson's central argument is that this new institution occupied a similar position relative to the American state as political parties and courts did. The capacity to organize across a complex constitutional order enabled it to control the purpose and allocation of federal highway aid for the better part of the twentieth century. Johnson investigates this new conception of the American highway bureaucracy, showing specifically where and how that extraconstitutional authority emerged, expanded, and manifested itself in the legislative history, physical dimensions, and geographical reach of the emerging highway system. The American Road reveals that all of the major highway legislation approved by Congress from 1916 to 1941 was collectively developed and advanced by state and federal highway bureaucrats drawing on the new authority conferred by the system of federal grants in aid which required state legislatures to provide a state matching grant and local governments to relinquish control over decisions of location and design. The capacity to advance their policy aims through both the advice of experts and the will of the states not only secured the new highway program against renewed opposition in Congress in the 1920s but also won the strong support of the motor vehicle industry and set the stage for even more impressive policy gains of the 1930s when highways became the largest category of federal emergency public works. That collective authority however required a high threshold of consensus to secure and maintain producing not just a narrow one size fits all approach to technical issues but also a striking incapacity to respond to changing conditions. Johnson completes her compelling narrative by identifying the source of the interstate highway plan first proposed in 1939 and finally funded in 1956 in the internal dynamics of and external threats to that extraconstitutional authority.

Wake Up and Smell the Coffee Eric Bogosian, 2012-09-15 100% pure high octane Bogosian Bogosian's latest and greatest monologue. His wit is as venomous as ever his material even more devastating and polished than before. New York Daily News Bogosian hasn't simply crossed the line of good taste he has snorted it. The Daily Texan Wake Up is Bogosian's meditation on making it to the top of the ladder on falling off the ladder and on the exhilarating thrill of the ultimate crash and burn. Once again the author offers a blisteringly funny and dead on take of the chaos and alienation of post modern life in the U S of the year 2000. As Michael Feingold so ably offered in his Village Voice review Bogosian is there watching out for the downtrodden ridiculing the arrogant rich defending battered wives and neo hippie hitchhikers and never losing sight of his own capacity for being classed among the batters and bullies. But his 95 minutes is as fast and exciting a read as the theatre community offers. In our time the stage has almost been what classical thinkers saw it as a medium for criticizing life. How perfect that a solo performer should rediscover its roots by choosing his own life as the object of his criticism. Eric Bogosian born in Woburn Massachusetts has performed his plays and monologues at venues nationwide. Winner of Obie and Drama Desk Awards he has made four films of his work most notably Talk Radio and Suburbia. His novel Mall was recently published by Simon and Schuster.
