The Political Body Andrea Giunta, 2023-03-28 This book discusses how some works of art produced in Latin America in the sixties seventies and eighties forged a different understanding of the female body understood as space for the expression of a dissident subjectivity in relation to socially normalized places Representations of art and of feminist activism interrogated the disciplining of the female body that entails as well the disciplining of the male body Before a history of highly regulated artistic representations regardless of the occasional exceptions a historian might point out images erupted that questioned the social and institutional naturalization of the feminine and the masculine ARTnews ,1956

Breaching the Frame Pedro R. Erber, 2014-12-12 Circa 1960 artists working at the margins of the international art world breached the frame of canvas painting and ruptured the institutional frame of art Members of the Brazilian Neoconcrete group such as Hélio Oiticica and Lygia Clark and their counterparts in Japan such as Akasegawa Genpei and the Kansai based Gutai Art Association challenged the boundaries between art and non art between fiction and reality between visual artwork and its discursive frame In place of the indefinitely deferred promise of a revolution of the senses artists called for direct action here and now Pedro Erber situates the beginnings of these profound transformations of art in the politically charged debates on realism and abstraction and in the experiments of 1950s concrete poetry He shows how artists and critics in Brazil and Japan brought modern painting to a point of crisis that paved the way for the radical experiments of the 1960s generation In contrast to the dematerialization of the art object promoted by New York based critics and conceptual artists in the late 1960s avant garde artists and poets in Brazil and Japan embraced materiality as intrinsic and fundamental to their highly conceptual practices Breaching the Frame explores their uncannily contemporaneous trajectories tracing the emergence of participatory practices and theories that challenged the limits of aesthetic contemplation and redefined the politics of spectatorship
