Family Medicine J. L. Buckingham, E. P. Donatelle, W. E. Jacott, M. G. Rosen, Robert B. Taylor, 2013-06-29 JOHN S MILLIS
In 1966 the Citizens Commission on Graduate Medical Education observed that the explosive growth in biomedical science and the consequent increase in medical skill and technology of the twentieth century had made it possible for physicians to respond to the episodes of illness of patients with an ever increasing effectiveness but that the increase in knowledge and technology had forced most physicians to concentrate upon a disease entity an organ or organ system or a particular mode of diagnosis or therapy As a result there had been a growing lack of continuing and comprehensive patient care The Commission expressed the opinion that Now in order to bring medicine s enhanced diagnostic and therapeutic powers fully to the benefit of society it is necessary to have many physicians who can put medicine together again The Commission proceeded to recommend the education and training of substantial numbers of Primary Physicians who would by assuming primary responsibility for the patient s welfare in sickness and in health provide continuing and comprehensive health care to the citizens of the United States In 1978 it is clear that the recommendation has been accepted by the public the medical profession and medical education There has been a vigorous response in the development of family medicine and in the fields of internal medicine pediatrics and obstetrics One is particularly impressed by the wide acceptance on the part of medical students of the concept of the primary physician Dr John S Textbook Osteopathic Medicine Johannes Mayer, Clive Standen, 2018-01-22 For the first time a 60 person team of internationally renowned editors and authors presents a textbook of osteopathic medicine that is oriented towards clinical symptoms Introductory chapters on history philosophy and the spread of osteopathy are followed by a presentation of its scientific basis that clearly demonstrates how firmly osteopathy is rooted in science Further chapters cover osteopathic research diagnosis and principles of treatment Two parts on therapeutic strategies in osteopathic practice form the core of this book The first is divided into regions of the body the second into clinical specialties that offer opportunities for osteopathic treatment In both clinical parts osteopathic therapy is presented in the entirety in which it is actually practiced without the common but artificial separation of parietal visceral and craniosacral treatment First the clinical symptom is explained from a medical perspective then the osteopathic perspective and and treatment is presented Thus the title is not only suitable for conveying a profound understanding of osteopaths in training be they doctors or non medical practitioners but also as a clinical reference of osteopathic medicine for everyday treatment Basic Student Charges, 1972-73 and 1973-74 Arthur Podolsky, 1975 Current Catalog National Library of Medicine (U.S.), First multi year cumulation covers six years 1965 70 Psychiatric Consultation in Childbirth Settings Ronald L. Cohen, 2012-12-06 The primary purposes of this volume are 1 To provide mental health practitioners with a current overview of our knowledge about normal parental development during pregnancy and its relation to fetal development with particular emphasis on the impact of acute and chronic stress on these developmental processes 2 To provide an understanding of the general state of the field of pregnancy and childbirth care both in conventional health systems and in alternative options 3 To provide an understanding of models of consultation and liaison that are adapted to the special conditions of pregnancy and childbirth care as contrasted to the more traditional modes that characterize these activities in medical and surgical hospitals If there prove to be secondary gains as a result of pursuing these goals so much the better The most desirable of these would be a heightening of awareness of the mental health needs of pregnant families and of the risks they incur in transition from non parenthood to parenthood and a more effective level of primary and secondary prevention of childhood mental disorders These latter goals are more global and perhaps even a bit grandiose Their attainment could only be documented through a series of carefully designed research projects aimed at measuring long range developmental outcome in children and families who have experienced appropriate and early intervention during the pregnancy period

The Clinical Psychology of Aging Martha Storandt, Ilene C. Siegler, Merrill F. Elias, 2012-12-06 It has been estimated that there are at least 2 500 000 adults 10% of the population above age 65 who are currently in need of some sort of mental health services Kramer Taube and Redick 1973 Other estimates are even higher e g Pfeiffer 1977 It is expected that this number will increase as the number of older adults increases over the next 40 years Probably less than 400 clinical psychologists are now providing services to this age group The number of elderly patients actually seen by these psychologists is very very small One national survey found that of 353 psychologists who reported that they had older clients only 495 individuals were seen for psychological testing and 1423 for psychotherapy in the one month just prior to the response Dye in press Assuming that the same individuals were not seen for both testing and therapy within the one month period a questionable assumption approximately 08% of the at least two and one half million older adults in need of psychological services are now being supplied with these services in some form or another Thus the need for increased involvement of clinical psychology with the aged is undeniable However few resources currently exist which will serve to increase the number of clinical psychologists trained to meet this need Probably less than 100 clinical psychologists living today have received any kind of formal graduate training in the clinical psychology of the aging Storandt 1977

The Nature and Treatment of the Stress Response George S. Everly Jr., R. Rosenfeld, 2012-12-06 Barely more than twenty years ago the inquiry into the nature and implications of the psychophysiologic stress response seemed to be restricted to laboratory animals Today however scientists from a wide range of disciplines are studying stress and its implications for human health and disease This may be because our technical ability actually to measure the phenomenon has increased as has our understanding of human psychophysiology Just as important how ever may be the fact that we have entered a new era of disease According to Kenneth Pelletier we have entered upon an era in which stress plays a dominant role in the determination of human disease Pelletier has stated that up to 90% of all disease may be stress related Whether this estimation seems inflated or not the fact remains that clinicians of all kinds including physicians psychologists physical therapists social workers and counselors are daily being confronted with clients suffering from excessive psychophysiologic stress arousal This fact has created a need to know more about the stress response and its treatment Although more and more health care professionals are directly or indirectly working with clients who manifest excessive stress there has been no text previously written which attempted to condense between the covers of a single volume a practical clinically comprehensive discussion of what stress is as best we currently understand it and how to treat it when it becomes excessive PSRMLS Resource Libraries Union List of Serials ,1987 Scientific Directory and Annual Bibliography National Institutes of Health (U.S.),1978 Hormonal Actions in Non-endocrine Systems W.B. Essman,2012-12-06 The actions of hormones upon systems outside of the usual target sites for such molecules represents an area of increasing interest and growing clinical significance This volume represents a cross section of such actions of hormones upon several relevant sites In the first chapter of this volume Dr Malick discusses the current status of endorphins as analgesic agents It is now known that a more primary level of control exists for μ endorphin in that a 41 amino acid peptide has been isolated from ovine hypothalamus this peptide stimulates μ endorphin release as well as the secretion of corticotropin Vale et al 1981 The analgesic properties of corticotropin and its immunoactive like analogs are well known so it does not come as a surprise that these two classes of analgesic peptides are regulated by a common hypothalamic control peptide It may also be of interest to observe that an increase in μ endorphin concentration in the pituitary occurs in genetically obese mice and rats and that such obesity can be attenuated through the administration of naloxone Margules et al 1978 It has also been determined that genetically obese mice have a probable cholecystokinin deficiency in the cerebral cortex in that this peptide is a satiety inducing agent Saito et al 1981 The analgesic properties of the latter have also been observed The extra pituitary actions of another pituitary peptide as examined in the second chapter of this volume by Dr

Advances in Perinatal Medicine Aubrey Milunsky,2012-12-06 The state of health care is reflected by perinatal and neonatal morbidity and mortality as well as by the frequencies of long term neurological and developmental disorders Many factors some without immediately recognizable significance to childbearing and many still unknown undoubtedly contribute beneficially or adversely to the outcome of pregnancy Knowledge concerning the impact of such factors on the fetus and surviving infant is critical Confounding analyses of pregnancy outcome especially these past 2 or 3 decades are the effects of newly undertaken invasive or inactive therapeutic approaches coupled with the advent of high technology Many innovations have been introduced without serious efforts to evaluate their impact prospectively and objectively The consequences of therapeutic misadventures characterized the past it seems they have been replaced to a degree by some of the complications of applied technology. Examples abound after overuse of oxygen was recognized to cause retrolental fibroplasia its restriction led to an increase in both neonatal death rates and neurologic damage in surviving infants. Administration of vitamin K to prevent neonatal hemorrhagic disease particularly when given in what we now know as excessive dosage occasionally resulted in kernicterus. Prophylactic sulfonamide use had a similar end result. More recent is the observation of bronchopulmonary dysplasia as a complication of respirator therapy for hyaline membrane disease. The decade of the eighties opened with the all time highest rate of cesarean section in the United States.
