Art History After Modernism Hans Belting, 2003-08. Art history after modernism does not only mean that art looks different today; it also means that our discourse on art has taken a different direction. If it is safe to say it has taken a direction at all, so begins Hans Belting's brilliant iconoclastic reconsideration of art and art history at the end of the millennium, which builds upon his earlier and highly successful volume The End of the History of Art. Known for his striking and original theories about the nature of art, according to The Economist, Belting here examines how art is made, viewed and interpreted today. Arguing that contemporary art has burst out of the frame that art history had built for it, Belting calls for an entirely new approach to thinking and writing about art. He moves effortlessly between contemporary issues, the rise of global and minority art and its consequences for Western art history, installation and video art and the troubled institution of the art museum and questions central to art history's definition of itself, such as the distinction between high and low culture, art criticism versus art history and the invention of modernism in art history. Forty-eight black and white images illustrate the text perfectly, reflecting the state of contemporary art. With Art History after Modernism, Belting retains his place as one of the most original thinkers working in the visual arts today.

Children Are Artists

Art Daniel Marcus Mendelowitz, 1953. The child artist scribbler and other stages of a child artist. Schinneller, 1966. Play and Creativity in Art Teaching. George Székely, 2015-03-02. In Play and Creativity in Art Teaching, esteemed art educator George Székely draws on his two classic volumes Encouraging Creativity in Art Lessons and From Play to Art to create a new book for new times. The central premise is that art teachers are not only a source of knowledge about art but also a catalyst for creating conditions that encourage students to use their own ideas for making art. By observing children at play and using props and situations familiar to them, teachers can build on children's energy and self-initiated discoveries to inspire school art that comes from the child's imagination. The foundation of this teaching approach is the belief that the essential goal of art teaching is to inspire children to behave like artists: that art comes from within themselves and not from the art teacher. Play and Creativity in Art Teaching offers plans for the study of children's play and for discovering creative art teaching as a way to bring play into the art room. While it does not offer a teaching formula or a single set of techniques to be followed, it demystifies art and shows how teachers can help children find art in familiar and ordinary places accessible to everyone This book also speaks to parents and the important roles they can play in supporting school art programs and nourishing the creativity of their children Facility Management Guide, the Army Crafts Program, 1965
