

Queen's position looks unimportant, but it is vital to the result.

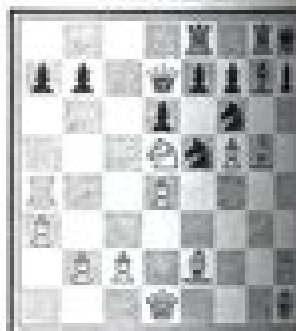

No. 79 is a similar position, with White's action against King on one side, the Queen on the other. The combined rests on the unsupported Queen, and the decisive sacrifice resembles a discovered check. We must add that the moves given were only the main variation. Actually No.

realised the threat well enough, and the continuation to 1... Q-Q1; 2 R-Kt3, P x P; 3 Kt5 - Kt6 ch, etc.

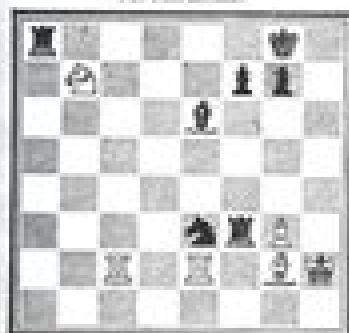

In No. 80 is yet another example of the same kind. White's Queen is intent on going to KR5, with a mate in her way is blocked by the Bishop. The latter, at last, removes itself, attacking Black's Queen. Note that White had already given up a Knight before offering the Bole. If he had continued 2 P x Kt, then Q x P defends Black KRP. Note also how the combination is assisted by the Black King's stalemate position.

All these examples demonstrate the opening of lines constructed not by hostile pieces but by those of the player making the combination. Lines may be opened with must a check; and the line may be diagonal or vertical, even, conceivably, horizontal.

No. 42, based on the same idea, presents a special case. Although again we have an unprotected piece on one side of the board and an attack on the other, two pieces are fully attacked at once, in such a way that the Rook cannot go to the defence of the Knight. A very characteristic sense of this type of combination, for the White Knight's position at QK17 seems more chance. As a matter of fact, de Knight has captured a Pawn there, and it is reasonable that a piece so distant from its own forces should not only be in danger but should be the cause of loss of the game. Many recall No. 76, where the Bishop's capture of the QP was as a lure for the decisive attack.

Detailed analysis of such combinations, with their sacrifices which are only justified after a series of moves, is very difficult, but becomes much easier when one is familiar with the idea that is the live wire in them.

We must not be afraid of dwelling on this fundamental point, that combinations, like tactical manoeuvres, must be guided by an idea. Otherwise one becomes lost in a labyrinth of variations.
