Alternatives To Cognition A New Look At Explaining Human Social Behavior:

Alternatives to Cognition Christina Lee, 1998 In this provocative book Christina Lee takes a consciously critical approach to the apparently unchallenged principle that conscious thought is the cause of all human behavior Without becoming polemical or destructive she reconsiders a wide range of issues in mainstream American and European social psychology Suitable for an international audience the book deals with issues in mainstream American and European social psychology It assumes some familiarity with contemporary social and applied psychology and would be appropriate as a text or supplementary reading for senior undergraduate and postgraduate courses in social psychology and psychological theory although it is also written with an academic research audience in mind While it is written largely for psychologists it would also be of interest to academics from other social science disciplines with a general interest in explanations of individual social behavior sloppy experimental practices inadequate statistical methods and publication bias Leys offers a genealogy of the theoretical expectations and scientific paradigms that have guided and motivated priming research itself Examining scientists intellectual strategies their responses to criticism and their assumptions about the nature of subjectivity Anatomy of a Train Wreck raises crucial questions about the evidence surrounding unconscious influence and probes the larger stakes of the replication crisis psychology's status as a science

Handbook of Motivation and Cognition Across Cultures Richard Sorrentino, Susumu Yamaguchi, 2011-04-28 In recent years there has been a wealth of new research in cognition particularly in relation to supporting theoretical constructs about how cognitions are formed processed reinforced and how they then affect behavior Many of these theories have arisen and been tested in geographic isolation It remains to be seen whether theories that purport to describe cognition in one culture will equally prove true in other cultures The Handbook of Motivation and Cognition Across Cultures is the first book to look at these theories specifically with culture in mind The book investigates universal truths about motivation and cognition across culture relative to theories and findings indicating cultural differences Coverage includes the most widely cited researchers in cognition and their theories as seen through the looking glass of culture The chapters include self regulation by Tory Higgins unconscious thought by John Bargh attribution theory by Bernie Weiner and self verification by Bill Swann among others The book additionally includes some of the best new researchers in cross cultural psychology with contributors from Germany New Zealand Japan Hong Kong and Australia In the future culture may be the litmus test of a theory before it is accepted and this book brings this question to the forefront of cognition research Includes contributions from researchers from Germany New Zealand Japan Hong Kong and Australia for a cross cultural panel Provides a unique perspective on the effect of culture on scientific theories and data

Dynamic systems theory and embodiment in psychotherapy research. A new look at process and outcome

Sergio Salvatore, Wolfgang Tschacher, Omar Carlo Gioacchino Gelo, Sabine C Koch, 2016-04-11 In an attempt to cease from reducing the world and its emergent phenomena to linear modeling and analytic dissection Dynamic Systems Theories DST and Embodiment theories and methods aim at accounting for the complex dynamic and non linear phenomena that we constantly deal with in psychology For instance DST and Embodiment can enrich psychology's understanding of the communicative process both in clinical and non clinical settings In psychotherapy an important amount of research has shown that next to other ingredients the therapeutic relationship is the most important active factor contributing to psychotherapy outcome These findings give communication a central role in the psychotherapy process In the traditional view the underlying model of understanding psychotherapy processes is that of a number of components summatively coming together enabling us to make a linear causal prediction Yet communication is inherently dynamic A shift to viewing the communication process in psychotherapy as a field dynamic phenomenon helps us to take into account nonlinear phenomena such as feedback processes within and between persons We thus propose an embodied enactive dynamic systems view as a new theoretical and methodological perspective that can more realistically capture what happens among and between two persons in psychotherapy This view reaches beyond the current narrow model of psychotherapy research DST and Embodied Enactive Approaches can offer solutions to the loss of non linear phenomena the complex dynamics of reality and the holistic level of analysis DST and Embodied Enactive Approaches have developed not in a single discipline but in a joined movement based on various fields such as physics biology robotics anthropology philosophy linguistics neuroscience and psychology and have only recently entered clinical theorizing The two new paradigms have already triggered a rethinking of the therapeutic exchange by recognizing the embodied nature of psychological and communicative phenomena Their integration opens up a promising scenario in the field of psychotherapy research developing new profoundly transdisciplinary theoretical concepts methodologies and standards of knowledge The notion of field dynamics enables us to account for the role of the communicational context in the regulation of intra psychological processes while at the same time avoiding the pitfalls of an ontologization of the hierarchy of systemic organization Moreover the new approach implements methodological strategies that can transcend the conventional opposition between idiographic and nomothetic sciences

What Determines Social Behavior? Investigating the Role of Emotions, Self-Centered Motives, and Social Norms Corrado Corradi-Dell'Acqua, Leonie Koban, Susanne Leiberg, Patrik Vuilleumier, Ernst Fehr, 2016-09-28

Human behavior and decision making is subject to social and motivational influences such as emotions norms and self other regarding preferences The identification of the neural and psychological mechanisms underlying these factors is a central issue in psychology behavioral economics and social neuroscience with important clinical social and even political implications However despite a continuously growing interest from the scientific community the processes underlying these factors as well as their ontogenetic and phylogenetic development have so far remained elusive In this Research Topic we collect articles that provide challenging insights and stimulate a fruitful controversy on the question of what determines social behavior Indeed over the last decades research has shown that introducing a social context to otherwise abstract tasks has diverse effects on social behavior On the one hand it may induce individuals to act irrationally for instance to refuse money but on the other hand it improves individuals reasoning in that formerly difficult abstract problems can be easily solved These lines of research led to distinct although not necessarily mutually exclusive models for socially driven behavioral changes For instance a popular theoretical framework interprets human behavior as a result of a conflict between cognition and emotion with the cognitive system promoting self interested choices and the emotional system triggered by the social context operating against them Other theories favor social norms and deontic heuristics in biasing human reasoning and encouraging choices that are sometimes in conflict with one's interest Few studies attempted to disentangle between these as well as other models As a consequence although insightful results arise from specific domains tasks a comprehensive theoretical framework is still missing Furthermore studies employing neuroimaging techniques have begun to shed some light on the neural substrates involved in social behavior implicating consistently although not exclusively portions of the limbic system the insular and the prefrontal cortex In this context a challenge for present research lies not only in further mapping the brain structures implicated in social behavior or in describing in detail the functional interaction between these structures but in showing how the implicated networks relate to different theoretical models This is Research Topic hosted by members of the Swiss National Center of Competence in Research Affective Sciences Emotions in Individual Behaviour and Social Processes We collected contributions from the international community which extended the current knowledge about the psychological and neural structures underlying social behavior and decision making In particular we encouraged submissions from investigators arising from different domains psychology behavioral economics affective sciences etc implementing different techniques behavior electrophysiology neuroimaging brain stimulations on different populations neurotypical adults children brain damaged or psychiatric patients etc Animal studies are also included as the data reported are of high comparative value Finally we also welcomed submissions of meta analytical articles mini reviews and perspective papers which offer provocative and insightful interpretations of the recent literature in the field
