A road to riches or a road to ruin? Sijbren de Jong, Willem Th. Oosterveld, Michel Roelen, Katharine Klacansky, Agne Silekaite, Rianne Siebenga, 2017-08-15

China's One Belt One Road (OBOR) project was formally introduced by Chinese President Xi Jinping in 2013. The project aimed at integrating trade and investment in Eurasia encompasses over 900 billion in planned investments of infrastructure across Central and South Asia, the Middle East and Central and Eastern Europe (CEE). A dedicated forum for cooperation with CEE countries has been around now for several years. Originally created in April 2012, the so-called 16+1 framework constitutes a platform which brings heads of state together annually to strengthen dialogue and cooperation between China and the CEE region. Chinese investment interests within the CEE region appear strongly related to privatization opportunities including large scale infrastructure projects and public procurement opportunities. China's interest in the CEE region and the creation of the 16+1 format in particular also gives rise to concerns that China is attempting to use the region as a medium through which to influence the EU from within. This influence manifests itself primarily in the form of initiatives which aim to persuade and/or pressure CEE countries to adopt favorable policies vis-à-vis China. These concerns stem from two directions. First, there is a fear that some deals concluded with China may not comply with EU rules on public procurement or other regulations and guidelines. Second, there is a fear of political influencing which some see exhibited by the EU in avoiding direct references or statements towards China's legal defeat over the South China Sea after the objection by some member states. China's engagement in the Middle East is arguably the most important component of the OBOR initiative as far as its strategic objectives are concerned. Beijing enunciates a clear interest in developing strong structural ties within the region, particularly with fossil fuel exports being the centerpiece at least for the initial stage. This also means of course that China will almost inevitably get embroiled in political matters and thus pose a challenge to the interests of other key players such as Russia, the US and the EU. While China seeks to avoid becoming yet another outside power that meddles in the region's affairs, it does already show signs of being prepared to become politically engaged. In its engagement in the Middle East, China's policy is banked on the hopes of being the newish entrant in the region which absolves it from any imperialist or interventionist baggage. This notwithstanding, regional players are going to be tempted to play the China card when dealing with the other major outside powers which will effectively pull China into the region's political vortices. Given OBOR's unprecedented scale, this new study by The Hague Centre for Strategic Studies (HCSS) investigates the extent to which Belt and Road related investments in CEE and the greater Middle East bring sufficient economic weight to both regions that at the same time can be turned into political influence. If this is indeed the case, a pertinent question to ask is whether China is prepared and willing to play a greater political and/or security role in CEE and the Middle East in the first place. In addition, the paper seeks to understand whether China's role can be judged as positive or negative for regional security as seen from the viewpoint of Europe and the Netherlands.

The Road

to Global Prosperity Michael Mandelbaum, 2014-03-25 In That Used to Be Us the blockbuster Michael Mandelbaum wrote with Thomas L. Friedman the authors analyzed the challenges America faces including globalization and described a path to recovering America's greatness In his widely and well reviewed The Road to Global Prosperity Mandelbaum one of America's leading authorities on international affairs looks at whether our optimism about the world's economic future is justified in view of the financial meltdown of 2008 still being felt Europe's troubled currency the slowing growth of China and other emerging nations He concludes that while the global economy does face major challenges in the years ahead there are compelling reasons to believe for optimism Mandelbaum says that globalization is both irreversible and a positive force for the United States and the world As technology and free markets expand and national leaders realize that their political power rests on delivering prosperity countries will cooperate more As more nations connect their economies will grow As immigration increases as more money crosses borders and as more countries emerge from poverty individuals and societies around the world will benefit The Road to Global Prosperity illuminates the crucial issues that will determine the economic future Mandelbaum makes a persuasive case for optimism as well as offering a concrete practical guide to the challenges and opportunities that lie ahead

Road Map to Scale Up Solar Irrigation Pumps in Bangladesh (2023-2031) Asian Development Bank, 2023-12-01 This road map shows how Bangladesh can swap diesel irrigation pumps for solar powered systems to reduce fuel imports increase farmers incomes and support the country's clean energy transition It provides guidelines for the installation of up to 45 000 solar irrigation pumps which could cut annual diesel consumption by 300 000 tons The plan would support 1.3 million farmers and give them the chance to sell surplus electricity Setting out financing proposals the publication explains how the zero carbon pumps can drive more sustainable groundwater use reduce poverty and inequality and help Bangladesh better adapt to the growing impacts of climate change

Multidisciplinary Teleconsultation in Developing Countries
Michelangelo Bartolo, Fabio Ferrari, 2018-03-26

This book presents a replicable model of multidisciplinary teleconsultation designed and set up by Global Health Telemedicine that offers very significant health benefits in remote and rural areas of developing countries. The model is based on experiences gained in sub-Saharan Africa while training and cooperating with local health professionals within the DREAM program managed by the Community of Sant'Egidio. This program has to date treated almost 300,000 patients across many countries and has provided health education and disease prevention training to tens of millions. It originated in the context of the fight against AIDS but has been extended to encompass other pathologies and to exploit the capabilities of new telemedicine technologies that allow multispecialist teleconsultation; hence the acronym now represents Disease Relief through Excellent and Advanced Means. In addition to thorough description of the program, readers will find reflections and analysis on logistical, technical, sociological and epidemiological issues. The book is divided into thematic chapters with easy-to-understand graphics. It will be a readily accessible source of information for professionals in international cooperation and global health students and professionals.
