 about cats And love And the Northwest Territories In this book of short stories Shirley M McGrath takes you on a journey to a little known place called Prelude Lake just north of Yellowknife There she lived in a magical house called Dragonholm with her husband and a menagerie of cats for ten eventful years Part memoir part book of poetry Cat of the North and Other Tails Tales demonstrates McGrath's great capacity for storytelling She invites you to immerse yourself in her life surrounded by all of her favourite things and does so with a deft hand at easy humour and a special insight into feline psychology McGrath speaks to her cats and they speak right back loud and proud or grouchy and pouty it all depends on the mood of the day In the story Sandy McGrath has to manage personality differences between her husband Sandy and her cat Ming My first term at the University of New Brunswick went well and I returned to Yellowknife for Christmas There I was met with complaints from both Sandy and Ming about each other He doesn't respect me sniffed Ming He treats me like an ordinary cat She's so arrogant claimed Sandy Not the least bit affectionate I told them both that they would have to learn to get along together because I was going back to school Whether the cats antics make you laugh or the quirky poems make you smile there is no doubt what this book is about love pure and simple
