Airpower and the Airlift Evacuation of Kham Duc. USAF Southeast Asia Monograph Series. Volume 5, Monograph 7 , 1979 This narrative describes the evacuation of more than 1 400 American soldiers Marines and airmen and Vietnamese men women and children from the Kham Duc Special Forces camp in southern I Corps on 12 May 1968 It treats the geographical and topographical setting the threat to the camp posed by two regiments of the North Vietnamese Army and the danger to the camp and its inhabitants from the communist seizure of all the high ground around the camp The monograph devotes individual chapters to the US Army and Marine helicopter rescue efforts tactical air support and tactical airlift The final chapter deals with the attempts to rescue the last three men at Kham Duc American aircraft losses were severe during the evacuation and the successful outcome of the mass rescue depended upon the skill and courage of American aircrews Had command and control been better losses probably would have been less severe Airpower and the Airlift Evacuation of Kham Duc Alan Gropman, Ltc Alan L Gropman, 2012-05-25 This volume has value for both the general reader and the aviation specialist For the latter there are lessons regarding command and control and combined unit operations that need to be learned to achieve battlefield success For the former there is a straightforward narrative about American aviators of all four services struggling in the most difficult of conditions to try to rescue more than 1 500 American and Vietnamese military and civilians Not all Americans moving through the events recounted in this monograph acted heroically but most did and it was that heroism that gave the evacuation the success it had This volume is fully documents so that the reader wishing to look deeper into this incident may do so Those who study the battle will see that it was something of a microcosm of the entire Vietnam War in the relationship of airpower to tactical ground efforts Kham Duc sat at the bottom of a small green mountain bowl and during most of 12 May 1968 the sky was full of helicopters forward air controller aircraft transports and fighters all striving to succeed and to avoid running into each other in what were most trying circumstances In the end they carried the day though by the narrowest of margins and heavy losses Office of Air Force History United States Air Force Air War Over South Vietnam, 1968-1975 Bernard C.
