

TIPS FOR BEING RESPECTFUL & CONSIDERATE WITH TRANS PARTNERS

Engaging intimately with anyone requires respect, consent, and understanding. When it's with a trans person, a few additional considerations can go a long way in making the experience comfortable and joyful for both of you, but feel free to steal these tips even if you're sleeping with cisgender people! Here's your quick guide:

- No Assumptions Zone - Don't assume what a trans person likes, wants, or feels based on your previous experiences or societal norms. The only way to know what someone likes is to talk and explore with them.
- Ask About Language - Every person has preferred terms for their body parts. Before getting intimate, ask your partner how they refer to theirs. If you're shy about this, ask if you can engage in a little pre hook up texting, and work it in there.
- Stay Educated - Take time to educate yourself about trans issues and bodies. It shows you care and makes for a more informed connection. May we recommend our own Library as a trusted resource?
- Consent, As Always, is Crucial - Just like with any partner, always ensure there's explicit consent before proceeding with any activity. Consent getting can be a super sexy part of sex.
- Avoid Stereotyping - Trans people, like all people, have diverse desires and boundaries. Don't pigeonhole them based on media representations or hearsay.
- Respect Boundaries - Some areas might be off-limits for a trans person due to dysphoria or other reasons. Always respect those boundaries.
