Asian American Parenting and Parent-Adolescent Relationships Stephen T. Russell, Lisa J. Crockett, Ruth K. Chao, 2010-06-25 The relationships between children and their parents are the building blocks for family relationships throughout life The nature of the parent child relationship begins with parenting the practices and strategies that parents engage in as they raise their children Parenting during childhood sets the stage for parent adolescent relationships These relationships make a critical difference during the teenage years we know that when parent adolescent relationships are healthy and strong adolescents are more likely to have high aspirations and achievement and to make healthier choices when it comes to risk taking Most of the research in this field has been based in the United States and has been conducted through studies of European American families Yet a growing body of research suggests important ethnic differences in styles of parenting and the qualities characterizing the parent adolescent relationship In this area of research most existing studies have examined ethnic and cultural group differences using widely accepted measures and concepts of parenting Comparative studies assume that dimensions of parenting such as parental warmth or control have the same meaning across cultures however given that conceptualizations of adolescent parent relationships have been developed and tested on samples comprised largely of European Americans we cannot rule out the possibility that the way we understand parenting has been shaped by the predominantly Western and U S focused research in this field

Cambodian American Youth, Identity, and Schooling Vichet Chhuon, 2025-06-27 This book examines how Cambodian American high school youth reconcile stereotypes identities and school opportunities and the ways these factors impact academic achievement and well being through ethnographic research The backdrop for Cambodian American life is intimately embedded within how Asians and Asian Americans are imagined within U S society This book argues that how Cambodian American students negotiate certain identities are in relation to perceived advantages associated with ethnic and panethnic labels across varying social contexts It highlights how the embrace of the model minority stereotype can come at a psychological cost for Asian Americans including increased feelings of internalized racism The chapters draw on ethnographic research collected across two years in one Southern California community Through students own meaning making it shows readers how Cambodian American youth are simultaneously invisible and hyper visible in their school and community which shapes access to important identities and relationships This work invites interrogation of the Asian American category itself and seeks to move the fields of Asian American and educational studies forward by critically examining not only how the model minority stereotype is constructed and imposed but also how it can be adopted and affirmed by Asian American youth themselves Practitioners who work with marginalized and underrepresented students and students of courses such as Asian American studies anthropology cultural studies and education and psychology will find this to be a helpful and enlightening text The accessible and clear writing makes this book of interest to a general audience as well
