Aging, Death, and the Completion of Being David D. Van Tassel, 2016-11-11 While the problems of aging are being studied with microscope computer and questionnaire as a medical social and economic challenge these essays introduce the humanistic perspective The assumption behind this work is that in history literature folklore and art we have the record of centuries of human experience to enhance our present understanding of aging old age and death Growing old is a process that occurs in every person every minute every hour that passes But if aging does not begin on the day of retirement at the age of sixty five what is the definition of old age Is it chronologically physiologically mentally or culturally determined Old age may not be a phase of life as easily identified as adolescence As our population continues to grow older we are ever more in need of greater sensitivity to the joys and tragedies of old age In recent years however our view of old age has been clouded by our negative feelings about death Old age has become inextricably associated with death It was not always so until a lower infant mortality rate better nutrition and a higher standard of living so greatly increased our chances of surviving into old age death was recognized as a threat at every stage of life This volume brings together twelve eminent scholars from various humanistic disciplines to trace the origins of our present attitudes and to identify the models and myths of old age in our culture The historians in the group ask how old people were treated in past societies Literary scholars and art critics discuss the effects of aging on the later works of authors and artists and art as a source of solace inspiration and revelation to the aged A philosopher explores a theme shared by all that the way one ages and dies is a function of the way one has lived Contributors John Demos Leon Edel Erik H Erikson Leslie Fiedler Tamara K Hareven Robert Kastenbaum Robert Kohn Juanita M Kreps Peter Laslett Francis V O Connor Robert F Sayre The Aging Family Terry Hargrave, Suzanne Midori Hanna, 2013-06-17 As the population of the United States ages and the lifespan increases so does the number of living generations The mental health care delivery system therefore faces new challenges The United States is heading into the 21st century with multigenerational families now commonplace with up to four or five generations co existing at the same time And each generation is forced to deal with its own developmental transitions as well as complex cross generational issues When a therapist steps into this situation his or her role has to take on board the complexity of the whole family system This text highlights the issues that hold families together and often tear them apart It offers core perspectives that seek to make the work of intervention easier and more effective for the clinician Whether the therapist is called upon to intervene on behalf of elder members to deal with issues such as depression or to step in when younger members are trying to determine how best to provide eldercare the perspectives presented in The Aging Family aim to enrich the strategies used

Death and Dying in India Suhita Chopra Chatterjee, Jaydeep Sengupta, 2019-12-12 Most aged in India are experiencing a highly protracted death in hospitals entangled in tubes and machines Such medicalised death entails huge psychological social and financial costs for both patients and their caregivers There are also many who are dying in abject neglect However Government response to end of life care has been almost negligible and there is an acute information deficit on dying matters This book examines different settings where elderly die including hospitals family homes and palliative set ups The discourse is set in the backdrop of international attempts to restructure and reconfigure the health delivery system for ageing population It makes critical commentaries on global developments offers state of art reviews of recent advances substantiates and corroborates facts by personal narratives and case histories The book overcomes a segmental understanding of the field by weaving various sociological medical legal and cultural issues together Finally the authors critically examine biomedicine's potential to meet the complex needs of the dying elderly In an attempt to bring cultural sensitivity in end of life care they explore the lost Indic art of dying which has the potential to de medicalise death Increasing public sensitivity to poor dying conditions of the elderly in India and facilitating changes to improve care systems this book also demonstrates the limitations of the western specialization of death It will be of interest to academics in the field of Medical Sociology Anthropology Medicine Palliative care Public Health and Social Work Social Policy and Asian Studies

Almost Over F. M. Kamm, 2020-04-01 In Almost Over F M Kamm presents a wide ranging philosophical discussion of the moral legal and medical issues related to aging dying and death She begins by considering different views about whether and why death is bad for the person who dies and what these views imply about the death of humanity She then considers whether there are conditions under which it might make sense to deliberately bring a person's death about given the processes of aging and dying that precede it In the opinion of some it is not only serious illness but ordinary aging that may give rise to this question and Kamm pays particular attention to the various ways in which aging could affect the distribution of goods and bads in a particular life Specifically she considers how the limitations and changes due to aging and the dying process affect meaning in one's life and whether the absence of meaning affects the reasonableness of not resisting or even seeking one's death Kamm explores these questions not only as they relate to individuals decisions but also as they relate to public policy and state action Recently attempts have been made to help the general public think about end of life issues by devising questionnaires and conversation guides Kamm evaluates some of these resources and articulates the moral implications of the assumptions they make about aging dying and value She also takes up the issue of physician assisted suicide as a way of ending one's life considering its moral permissibility and whether or not it ought to be legalized as a matter of public policy In doing so she examines arguments from discussions about capital punishment concerning state action and also methods of balancing costs and benefits including cost effectiveness analysis In her analysis Kamm engages with the views of such prominent philosophers medical doctors and legal theorists as Shelly Kagan Susan Wolf Atul Gawande Ezekiel Emanuel and Neil Gorsuch among others shedding new light on conversations about the moral complexities and consequences of aging dying and death
