Животът е немислим без наличието на специални регулаторни механизми, които да координират и регулират дейността на отделните клетки в организма. Благодарение на тези механизми организмът функционира като едно единно цяло, което непрекъснато се приспособява към променящата се околна среда. В организма има две системи, чиято функция е основно регулаторна – това са нервната и ендокринната системи. Нервната система осъществява регулация на жизнените процеси чрез използване на нервни сигнали, докато ендокринната система осъществява регулацията чрез използване на химични вещества (хормони). Много често регулацията е смесена – нервно-ендокринна.

Видове регулаторни системи

Отворени регулаторни системи

Всяка регулаторна система има вход и изход. Ако между изхода на системата и нейния вход няма връзка, системата се означава като отворена. Пример за такава система е нервната клетка (неврон). Невронът има къси израстъци (дендрити), чрез които приема влияния от множество други неврони или рецептори (Фиг.2.1). Той има един дълъг израстък (аксон), чрез който предава обработената информация на други неврони или ефекторни клетки (мускулни, жлезисти), които не повлияват дейността на неврона.

Затворени регулаторни системи

Устройство. Когато има връзка между изхода на системата и нейния вход, системата се означава като затворена, а връзката между изхода и

Фигура 2.1 Схема на неврон като пример на отворена регулаторна система.
