This authors' goal is to provide a conceptual framework for developing a therapeutic community which includes the understanding of motivation, and further explores with structural, cultural and nursing care. It is our hope that readers will find these and other questions which have provoked us to write, answered, satisfactorily. Communities, and family organizations that they believe are necessary to a therapeutic community is in the therapeutic. This book is a description of their experience at the Pillsbury Hospital which is an excellent model of a therapeutic community.

The ideas in this book have been adapted from the descriptions of psychiatric hospitals, psychiatric and geriatric hospitals, psychiatric and geriatric hospitals, family therapy, group therapy, and group therapy. These adaptations allow the use of new structural methods which have been adapted from the descriptions of psychiatric hospitals. The authors hope that these methods could be adapted to other settings in the hospital and community of nursing homes, leading to better patient care.
