Conservation of Historic Buildings Bernard Melchior Feilden, 1982 Since its publication in 1982 Sir Bernard Feilden's Conservation of Historic Buildings has become the standard text for architects and others involved in the conservation of historic structures Leading practitioners around the world have praised the book as being the most significant single volume on the subject to be published Now the book is re issued with revisions in softcover so that a greater audience can enjoy this classic book The result of the lifetime's experience of one of the world's leading architectural conservators the book comprehensively surveys the fundamental principles of conservation in their application to historic buildings and provides the basic information needed by architects engineers and surveyors for the solution of problems of architectural conservation in almost every climatic region of the world This softcover edition is organised into three complementary parts in the first the structure of buildings is dealt with in detail the second focuses attention on the causes of decay and the materials they affect and the third considers the practical role of the architect involved in conservation and rehabilitation As well as being essential reading for architects and others concerned with conservation many lay people with various kinds of responsibility for historic buildings will find this clearly written jargon free work a fruitful source of guidance and information Gain a valuable insight into the building conservation world Benefit from the world's leading authority Easy to understand jargon free source of guidance and information

Specifications for Building Conservation Rory Cullen, Rick Meier, 2017-09-19 In Specifications for Building Conservation the National Trust draws on a range of case studies and specifications to provide a much needed guide to specification writing for building conservation Although traditional building accounts for approximately a quarter of all buildings in the UK the old skills and understanding required for their care and maintenance have been increasingly eroded over the last century As the largest heritage charity in Europe the National Trust has a first class reputation for high standards of conservation and care and in this three volume set the Trust brings together a remarkable pool of expertise to guide conservation professionals and students through the process of successful specification writing This first book focusses on the materials used for the external fabric detailing successful approaches employed by the National Trust at some of their most culturally significant sites A range of studies have been carefully selected for their interest diversity and practicality showcasing projects from stonework repairs on the magnificent Grade I listed Hardwick Hall to the re thatching of the traditional cottages of the Holnicote Estate Complete with a practical Conservation Management Plan checklist this book will enable practitioners to develop their skills allowing them to make informed decisions when working on a range of project types This is the first practical guide to specification writing for building conservation and the advice provided by the National Trust experts will be of interest to any practitioners and students involved in building conservation both in the UK and beyond Profits generated from the sale of this publication will go to the National Trust Building Apprenticeship Scheme This provides placements for traditional skills at National Trust properties

Survey and Repair of Traditional Buildings Richard Oxley, 2015-11-17 Understanding the unique requirements of traditional buildings is crucial to providing appropriate guidance on their care and repair This book will help practitioners identify the particular issues relating to older buildings and the problems they may encounter when surveying and repairing them With the use of examples the author provides invaluable information on how traditional buildings perform emphasizing the need for a sensitive and sustainable approach which also takes account of the specific needs of the building The book examines all aspects to be included in any assessment for survey and repair and points out in detail the potential pitfalls It also explores the controversial issues surrounding the treatment of damp and timber decay advocating solutions that are appropriate to older buildings rather than using standard often damaging methods of treatment The extensive case studies not only illustrate good conservation in practice but also how projects can go badly wrong and how mistakes could have been avoided This title explores the causes of movement and the actions required It advises on alternatives to chemical treatment for damp and timber decay It provides fully illustrated case studies with numerous photographs It emphasizes a sustainable approach to conservation It outlines the key legislation issues It includes the Historic Buildings Prosecution Fines Database and other useful appendices

Conservation of Building and Decorative Stone F G Dimes, J. Ashurst, 2007-11-02 One of the problems which beset the practical conservation of stone buildings is the fragmentation of the disciplines involved This book with both volumes now available as one invaluable paperback brings these disciplines together by the involvement of contributors with different experiences and approaches to the same material Part one is an introduction to the complexities and background history of stone conservation followed by the most comprehensive description yet produced of the building and decorative stones used in the British Isles In part two practitioners involved in stone conservation describe ways in which major structural masonry problems secondary building problems and different stone surface conditions may be treated A variety of building types and environments has been used to ensure that the broad scope of common problems is covered This second part of the book will be of practical value to art historians archaeologists architects surveyors and engineers masonry contractors and sculpture conservators in solving problems and in learning to use each other's skills and experience

Building Conservation Philosophy John Earl, Andrew Saint, 2015-12-08 This is a book about ideas rather than techniques Public thirst for visible evidence of the past is not as it is often represented a recent phenomenon It was already well developed when an overseer of ancient monuments was appointed in sixth century Rome But if the desire to preserve aspects of the past is to do more than respond to popular whims and fashions or represent the personal views of ivory towered scholars and specialists it needs to have some kind of solid logical basis Philosophical questions are raised at every turn On what basis can buildings be singled out as historic buildings demanding special protection On what authority can we justify interfering with private property rights in pursuing such protective processes And how should we judge what is acceptable and unacceptable in the treatment of the buildings we value In this third substantially revised edition the author examines the nature of monuments and the varied motives for preserving them He traces the history of movements to preserve old buildings and the furious conflicts that have frequently surrounded restoration campaigns Philosophical problems arising in modern conservation practice including such controversial issues as skin deep preservation and the use of substitute materials are considered in detail More space is devoted in this edition to contextual issues New sections deal with issues of sustainability and the relationship of buildings to the townscape and landscape The number of illustrations has also been greatly increased The book is designed especially for students approaching the subject for the first time but may well be found stimulating by practitioners No easy formulae are offered What conservators have to nurture the author insists is an inquiring and self critical frame of mind enabling them to proceed from comprehensive knowledge of the buildings for the time being in their care via logical argument to defensible if not inevitable solutions

Urban Conservation and Historic Buildings Charles Mynors, Kensington and Chelsea (London, England), 1984 Interior Finishes and Fittings for Historic Building Conservation Michael Forsyth, Lisa White, 2011-11-03 Interior Finishes to chimneypieces lighting and fire safety management The series is particularly aimed at construction professionals architects decorative arts historians and specifiers surveyors engineers as well as postgraduate building conservation students and undergraduate architects and surveyors as specialist or optional course reading The series is also of value to other professional groups such as commissioning client bodies managers and advisors and interested individuals involved in house refurbishment or setting up a building preservation trust While there is a focus on UK practice most of the content is of relevance overseas just as UK conservation courses attract many overseas students for example from India China Australia and the USA The chapters are written by leading conservators historians architects and related professionals who together reflect the interdisciplinary nature of conservation work This volume on the historic interior is the fourth of a series on Historic Building Conservation that combine conservation philosophy in the built environment with knowledge of traditional materials and structural and constructional conservation techniques and technology Understanding Historic Building Conservation Structures Construction in Historic Building Conservation Materials Skills for Historic Building Conservation Interior Finishes Fittings for Historic Building Conservation While substantial publications exist on each of the subject areas some by the authors of the Historic Building Conservation series few individuals and practices have ready access to all of these or the time to read them in detail The aim of the series is to introduce each aspect of conservation and to provide concise basic and up to date knowledge within four volumes sufficient for the professional to appreciate the subject better and to know where to seek further help
