Conserving Biological Diversity A Strategy For Protected Areas In The Asia Pacific Region:

Conserving Biological Diversity Susan M. Braatz, 1992-01-01 Loss of biological diversity through the extinction of species the conversion and degradation of natural habitats and the disruption of ecological processes is occurring throughout the world at an unprecedented rate As species and their habitats disappear so do products of present and future value genes with which to improve crop varieties and livestock and the natural resiliencies of the world's living resources to respond to climatic and environmental change Nowhere else is the loss of biodiversity expected to be higher during the coming decades than in the Asia Pacific region The loss of biodiversity is irreversible Recognizing this the Asia Environment Division prepared this paper which is intended to identify priority areas of investment in the Asia Pacific region The paper accepts the importance of biodiversity conservation and suggests that policy change coupled with the establishment of protected area systems will be critical to success A wide range of interventions will be needed to support these efforts toward conserving biodiversity interventions involving national and local governments national and international nongovernmental organizations and most importantly local people The strategy defined in this paper is intended to complement existing national and international initiatives and to build partnerships in conservation for the 1990s The Biodiversity

Observation Network in the Asia-Pacific Region Shin-ichi Nakano, Tetsukazu Yahara, Tohru Nakashizuka, 2012-07-26 Biological diversity is important for ecosystem function and services which in turn is essential for human well being Under the Convention on Biological Diversity international efforts have been made to achieve a significant reduction in the current rate of biodiversity loss The loss continues however The Asia Pacific region includes both developing countries with high biodiversity and developed countries with sophisticated data collection and analyses but only limited information about the status quo of biodiversity in this region has been available Many Asia Pacific countries have rapidly grown their economies and social infrastructures causing a loss of biodiversity and requiring an urgent mandate to achieve a balance between development and conservation in the region In December 2009 scientists successfully organized the Asia Pacific Biodiversity Observation Network in the region to establish a network for research and monitoring of ecosystems and biodiversity and to build a cooperative framework The present volume is the first collection of information on biodiversity in the Asia Pacific and represents a quantum step forward in science that optimizes the synergy between development and biodiversity conservation

Biodiversity Conservation in the Asia and Pacific Region, 1995 Biodiversity Conservation in Transboundary Protected Areas National Research Council, Policy and Global Affairs, Office of International Affairs, Office of Central Europe and Eurasia, 1996-10-27 Recognizing the increasing rate of species loss on a global scale and that neither pollution nor ecosystems respects political boundaries cooperation on many different levels is required to conserve biodiversity This volume uses four protected areas that Poland shares with its neighbors as case studies to explore opportunities to integrate science and management in transboundary protected areas in Central Europe for the conservation of biodiversity Specific topics include biodiversity conservation theories and strategies problems of wildlife management and impacts of tourism and recreational use on protected areas Conserving Biological Diversity in Managed Tropical Forests Jill M.

Blockhus,1992 At the meeting of the International Tropical Timber Organization held in Bali in 1990 ITTO adopted the target of ensuring that all tropical timber marketed internationally should by the year 2000 come from forests that are managed sustainably This study is an attempt to determine whether the member countries of the ITTO have a legal and administrative basis for managing their production forests in ways which will allow these forests to contribute to biological diversity conservation It also attempts to assess the extent to which such management is already applied on the ground through member country studies A set of guidelines on ways in which management of production forests could be improved is included A Governance Approach to Civil Service Reform in Sub-Saharan Africa Mamadou Dia,1993-01-01 Inefficient civil service administrations are jeopardizing future development in many African countries The reforms suggested in this paper would make these administrations more accountable enforce the rule of law and reward bureaucrats solely on their
