Conserving Cultures:

Conserving Cultures Harry Redner, 2004-02-13 As the forests are felled cultures are destroyed In our technological civilization the forces of globalization are a threat to both nature and culture The many and varied cultures of the world are beset by the homogenizing impact of the global media which represents the triumph of technics The fate can only be averted by a concerted effort at culture conservation Nature and culture must be protected to preserve a humanly habitable world Conserving Cultures is the first book to link nature and culture conservation The threat to nature is now well understood how it relates to cultures is not This book both describes and analyzes theoretically the danger to culture and proposes practical remedial measures

Beyond Civilization Harry Redner, 2013-01-31 For Harry Redner the phrase beyond civilization refers to the new and unprecedented condition the world is now entering specifically the condition commonly known as globalization Redner approaches globalization from the perspective of history and seeks to interpret it in relation to previous key stages of human development His account begins with the Axial Age 700 300 BC and proceeds through Modernity after AD 1500 to the present global condition What is globalization doing to civilization In answering this question Redner studies the role played by capitalism the state science and technology He aims to show that they have had a catalytic impact on civilization through their reductive effect on society culture and individualism However Redner is not content to diagnose the ills of civilization he also suggests how they might be ameliorated by cultural conservation Above all it is to the problem of decline in the higher forms of literacy that he addresses himself for it is on the culture of the book that previous civilizations were founded This study will be of interest to sociologists historians and social and political theorists Its style makes it accessible also to general readers interested in civilization past present and future

Language in the Academy Joan Turner, 2010-12-01 This book takes a critical look at why issues of language in higher education are routinely marginalised despite the growing internationalisation of universities Through analyses of a variety of intercultural encounters the book highlights the range of interpretative possibilities available for understanding these encounters and suggests the role that the reality of the contemporary intercultural dynamic between the Socratic and Confucian pedagogic traditions can play in driving change to the pedagogic practices of higher education Another important aim of the book is to examine language in the academy as an object of cultural theory While rooted in the practical and empirical reality of teaching and using language in higher education this book argues for the importance of examining the institutional interface between language and higher education and of critically exploring the values inscribed in the pedagogy and evaluation of academic language

Culture in Law and Development Lan Cao, 2016 The growth of international law in the post World War II era stemmed partly from the belief that universal norms would make life for the entire world's population safer more equitable and more conducive to each person's acquisition of basic material needs Starting in the sixties and seventies some scholars and activists challenged this assumption and established the school of cultural relativism a model that pays deference to local cultural traditions and favors them over international human rights norms Scholars tried to create and practice a middle ground approach between universalism and relativism whereby the most egregious violations would be prevented through assimilating only jus cogens norms into indigenous groups existing cultural traditions Such efforts at combining a few select international norms with local cultural traditions largely failed Culture in Law and Development presents a provocative new solution to the seemingly intractable problem of combining international norms with local cultural traditions by changing culture through law and development In this book Lan Cao demonstrates how the gradual expansion of customary international law CIL provides a model for changing culture in ways that protect and advance local populations The book adopts a holistic view of development and argues that cultural norms that impede the human capabilities of the poor women and other marginal groups should be changed The book reveals how a more conscious coordinated effort on such change can succeed while non violative local traditions are otherwise honored and preserved Cao proposes that cultural change does not have to constitute cultural disrespect and that local societies only benefit by a careful combination of externally wrought change and internally fostered tradition
