Integrated Cost and Schedule

Control for Construction Projects Frederick W. Mueller, 2012-12-06 Management and administrative processes within the construction industry have been undergoing major changes in the last several decades. These changes have involved significant adjustments in management science and management techniques brought about by the need for contemporary valid information with which to manage the construction process. In short, management in the construction industry is changing significantly; change will continue at an accelerated pace at least through the next decade. The responses required of construction industry management are now resulting in a movement away from an entrepreneurial management style to professional management techniques and procedures. THE COMPELLING ECONOMIC ISSUES The issues forcing these changes are economic. The rising costs of construction and of money are forcing the buyers of construction services to be more demanding. Their demands are for more construction economies, more production and more productivity than at any time in the past. Nowhere has this been more evident than in the Business Roundtable on construction and in the response of the construction industry to it. To be successfully responsive, management in the construction industry will be required to use the best project management methods available for cost control, schedule control and for financial and accounting controls. But responsive professional management can survive and will flourish within this more demanding economic environment.

Project Cost Control in Construction R. Pilcher, 1994-08-15 This book examines a range of aspects concerning cost control from financial feasibility studies through the design to cost control of the work on site. It considers all of these from the viewpoint of both owner/developer and contractor. The new edition has been updated to include a new chapter on financial control and further material on data collection, site costing and cost control. Additional examples have also been added. Construction Cost Estimating for Project Control James M. Neil, 1982 Cost Studies of Buildings Allan Ashworth, 1999 The study of building costs is no longer restricted to the analysis of tenders, final accounts and capital cost prediction. Although these areas remain important, the study has moved towards whole life costs and a more holistic approach. This relates costs not just to space but also to the activities undertaken in that space. This new third edition of Cost Studies of Buildings has been extensively revised and restructured to reflect this trend. It provides a practical guide to the different methods of forecasting, planning and controlling costs associated with building works as well as analysing the economics of efficient and effective use of buildings, space, plant and equipment. Construction Cost Management Keith Potts, Nii Ankrah, 2014-01-23 In this updated and expanded second edition, Keith Potts and Nii Ankrah examine key issues in construction cost management across the building and civil engineering sectors both in the UK and overseas. Best practice from pre-contract to post-contract phases of the project life cycle are illustrated using major projects such as Heathrow Terminal 5, Crossrail and the London 2012 Olympics as case studies. More worked examples, legal cases, case studies and current research have been introduced to cover every aspect of the cost manager's role. Whole life costing, value management and risk management are also addressed and self-test questions at the end of each chapter support independent learning. This comprehensive book is essential reading for students on surveying and construction management programmes as well as built environment practitioners with cost or project management responsibilities.
