Cybergrace Jennifer Cobb,1999-06-07      CyberGrace Jennifer J. Cobb,1998 Theologian and high tech consultant Jennifer Cobb combines her expertise to create a new theory of the Divine in the Information Age As computers and artificial intelligence systems become more sophisticated the question of whether we can find spiritual life in cyberspace is beginning to be asked CyberGrace The Search for God in the Digital World is a bold thought provoking affirmative answer to one of the most intriguing inquiries of our time Until now an unbridgeable schism has separated the world of the spirit and that of the machine According to an increasingly compelling concept known as emergence the gulf may be an imaginary one Fifty years ago Jesuit paleontologist Teilhard de Chardin combined his lifelong passions of God and science to predict the emergence of cyberspace based on his studies of evolution Using Teilhard s theories as a starting point Jennifer Cobb asserts that as technical systems become more complex with simple predictable mechanisms coalescing into hierarchies of increasing organization something elegant inspired and absolutely unpredictable simply and suddenly emerges Many observers today see this hand of God showing itself in disparate disciplines from evolutionary theory to artificial intelligence and especially in the furthest realms of cyberspace where brute computation seems to give way to divine inspiration CyberGrace offers paradoxical evidence that our machines may be conduits to a deeper spirituality With daily headlines announcing dizzying advances in science and information technology many people wonder about their and their children s ability to lead lives imbued by a sense of the sacred In the new world where the search for spirituality may seem scattered and unfocused Cobb brilliantly uses the most popular and prevalent phenomenon of our times the computer to find a world filled with meaning and love      Literary Encounters with the Reign of God Sharon H. Beyond Cutting Edge? Paul C. Heidebrecht, 2014-03-10 A quick scan of any newsstand is enough to confirm the widespread preoccupation with technological change As a myriad of articles and advertisements demonstrate not only are we preoccupied with technology but we are bombarded with numerous reminders that the cutting edge is in constant motion Most often the underlying assumption of Christians is that we have no choice but to find ways to cope with the latest and greatest Indeed it is often assumed that the church has no choice but to find ways to cope with its new technological context This book does not make the same assumptions Building on the work of Mennonite theologian John Howard Yoder it argues that the practices of the church make it possible for Christians to conscientiously engage technology This happens when we recognize that marks of the church such as patience vulnerability and servanthood can put technological ideals such as speed control and efficiency in their proper place In the course of grappling with three examples of morally formative technologies automobiles genetically modified food and the Internet this book goes beyond Yoder's thought by emphasizing that the church also plays a crucial role in our moral formation

Technology as Magic Richard Stivers, Peter Stirk, 2001-08-01 What gives the mass media particularly advertising and television their extraordinary power over our lives so that even the most jaded and sophisticated among us are troubled and fascinated by their allure The secret according to Richard Stivers in this brilliant new book lies in the curious relationship between technology and magic Stivers argues the two are now related to one another in such a way that each has taken on important characteristics of the other His contention is that our expectations for technology have become magical to the point that they have generated a multitude of imitation technologies that function as magical practices These imitation technologies flourish in the fields of psychology management administration and the mass media and their paramount purpose in human adjustment and control Advertising and television programs in particular contain the key magical rituals of our civilization In a fascinating analysis of television programming Stivers shows how various genres news sports game shows soap operas sitcoms etc have their distinct mythological symbols Through dramatized information they symbolically connect consumer goods and services to desired outcomes the utopian goals of success happiness and health thus enveloping technology both real and imitation in a magical cocoon
