Analysis of Select Wildlife Cases in South Africa Didi Wamukoya, Mira Dutschke, 2017-10-18 The world is in the midst of a poaching and Illegal Wildlife Trade IWT crisis which threatens survival of many species Poaching and IWT involves a wide range of species including insects reptiles amphibians fish and mammals IWT has been estimated by different sources to be worth USD 7 23 Billion annually Targeted species in South Africa include terrestrial mammals such as rhino endangered plants including cycads and marine species such as abalone South Africa lost 1 215 rhinos to poaching in 2014 up from 13 rhinos lost in 2007 Demand for wildlife and wildlife products was driven by need for pharmaceuticals food pets ornamental and traditional medicinal purposes The poaching crisis and IWT are no longer emerging issues The poaching crisis began in the mid 2000 s when demand for ivory and rhino horn significantly increased From that time wildlife crime has become more sophisticated and now involves large scale

transnational organised crime The spike in wildlife crime poses a growing threat not only to wildlife but also to national security rule of law sustainable development and the well being of local communities The scale and nature of the challenges posed by wildlife crime have been recognized in international fora International organizations such as CITES and INTERPOL have held discussions and made decisions on interventions to reduce or curb this crime High level political conferences have also addressed the issue Despite these national and international efforts corruption weak legislation weak judicial systems and light sentences allow criminal networks to continue being involved in IWT because to them it is a low risk business with high returns South Africa has enhanced its law enforcement efforts to combat poaching and IWT The South African government's approach to criminal justice is contained in the overarching 1996 National Crime Prevention Strategy NCPS The NCPS motivated a shift in emphasis from crime control to crime prevention which is a shift towards understanding crime as a social issue rather than a solely security issue It is based on 3 pillars that is improving the criminal justice process reducing crime through environmental design changing public values and education and reducing transnational crime The 1998 White Paper on Safety and Security builds on this NCPS framework It focuses on three key areas namely law enforcement crime prevention and institutional reform to meet delivery goals While both these documents are still applicable to understand South Africa's approach to criminal justice the overall strategies seem to have shifted The South African Police Service adopted a high profile strategy in March 2000 to combat crime in particular hotspots The White Paper on Local Government 1998 also calls for crime prevention and encourages its integration with other aspects of local development Partnerships with NGOs and community based organizations are called for especially in areas where local government lacks skills including crime prevention In 2012 Cabinet approved the Integrated Social Crime Prevention Strategy developed by the National Department of Social Development Further the White Paper on Community Safety Forums 2012 led to the establishment of community safety forums which are supposed to be coordinating structures at local government level The National Development Plan published in 2012 also attaches significant importance to the safety The key enforcement institution for wildlife crimes in South Africa is the Department of Environmental Affairs DEA through its Environmental Management Inspectorate EMI According to the DEA illegal hunting continued to be the predominant wildlife crime in the 2014 2015 fiscal year There were 386 arrests for rhino related offences which was an increase from 343 arrests in 2013 The number of environmental crimes finalised increased from 165 to 265 cases in the 2014 2015 reporting period compared to the 2013 2014 reporting period The conviction rate also increased from 86% to 94.7%

Phytotechnology: Emerging Trends M. Daniel,A. Arya,2012-07-01 This book highlights the rapidly expanding horizons of Plant Sciences The conventional aspects of Botany remain the backbone of this subject but the growing population and environmental compulsions urge man to explore new avenues to tackle the problems of society Most of these areas which are interdisciplinary in nature and provide new and better solutions are pursued vigorously by researchers in Plant Sciences Medicinal plants including Nutraceuticals Biofuels Natural Dyes Biofertilisers Biopesticides Plant propagation methods including Tissue culture Plant Genomics Proteomics Climate change and Remote sensing techniques inclusive of GIS are some of the such emerging areas focused in this book The present book contains a good number of scientific articles penned by expert researchers in all these fields. Since researches in these areas are pursued in many of the Research centres and Universities this book will be a valuable and essential reference book for one and all who are interested in these subjects. Plant Biology and Biotechnology Bir Bahadur, Manchikarla Venkat Rajam, Leela Sahijram, K.V. Krishnamurthy, 2015-07-02. This volume offers a much needed compilation of essential reviews on diverse aspects of plant biology written by eminent botanists. These reviews effectively cover a wide range of aspects of plant biology that have contemporary relevance. At the same time they integrate classical morphology with molecular biology, physiology with pattern formation, growth with genomics, development with morphogenesis and classical crop improvement techniques with modern breeding methodologies. Classical botany has been transformed into cutting edge plant biology thus providing the theoretical basis for plant biotechnology. It goes without saying that biotechnology has emerged as a powerful discipline of Biology in the last three decades. Biotechnological tools, techniques and information used in combination with appropriate planning and execution have already contributed significantly to economic growth and development. It is estimated that in the next decade or two products and processes made possible by biotechnology will account for over 60% of worldwide commerce and output. There is therefore a need to arrive at a general understanding and common approach to issues related to the nature, preservation and use of biodiversity as it provides the raw material for biotechnology. More than 90% of the total requirements for the biotechnology industry are contributed by plants and microbes in terms of goods and services. There are however substantial plant and microbial resources that are waiting for biotechnological exploitation in the near future through effective bioprospection. In order to exploit plants and microbes for their useful products and processes we need to first understand their basic structure, organization, growth and development, cellular process and overall biology. We also need to identify and develop strategies to improve the productivity of plants. In view of the above, in this two volume book on plant biology and biotechnology, the first volume is devoted to various aspects of plant biology and crop improvement. It includes 33 chapters contributed by 50 researchers, each of which is an expert in his/her own field of research. The book begins with an introductory chapter that gives a lucid account on the past, present and future of plant biology, thereby providing a perfect historical foundation for the chapters that follow. Four chapters are devoted to details on the structural and developmental aspects of the structures of plants and their principal organs. These chapters provide the molecular biological basis for the regulation of morphogenesis of the form of plants and their organs involving control at the cellular and tissue levels. Details on biodiversity, the basic raw material for biotechnology, are discussed in a separate chapter in which emphasis is placed on the genetic species and ecosystem diversities and their conservation. Since fungi and other microbes form an important component of the overall biodiversity, special attention is paid to the treatment of fungi and other microbes in this volume. Four chapters respectively deal with an overview of fungi, arbuscular mycorrhizae and their relation to the sustenance of plant wealth, diversity and practical applications of mushrooms and lichens associated with a photobiont Microbial endosymbionts associated with plants and phosphate solubilizing microbes in the rhizosphere of plants are exhaustively treated in two separate chapters The reproductive strategies of bryophytes and an overview on Cycads form the subject matter of another two chapters thus fulfilling the need to deal with the non flowering Embryophyte group of plants Angiosperms the most important group of plants from a biotechnological perspective are examined exhaustively in this volume The chapters on angiosperms provide an overview and cover the genetic basis of flowers development pre and post fertilization reproductive growth and development seed biology and technology plant secondary metabolism photosynthesis and plant volatile chemicals A special effort has been made to include important topics on crop improvement in this volume The importance of pollination services apomixes male sterility induced mutations polyploidy and climate changes is discussed each in a separate chapter Microalga nutraceuticals vegetable oil based nutraceuticals and the importance of alien crop resources and underutilized crops for food and nutritional security form the topics of three other chapters in this volume There is also a special chapter on the applications of remote sensing in the plant sciences which also provides information on biodiversity distribution The editors of this volume believe the wide range of basic topics on plant biology that have great relevance in biotechnology covered will be of great interest to students researchers and teachers of botany and plant biotechnology alike

The Flowering of Australia's Rainforests Geoff Williams, 2021-05-03 The Flowering of Australia's Rainforests provides a comprehensive introduction to the pollination ecology evolution and conservation of Australian rainforest plants with particular emphasis on subtropical rainforests and their associated pollinators This significantly expanded second edition includes new information on the impact of climate change fire fragmentation and invasive species Rainforests continue to be a focus of global conservation concern not only from threats to biodiversity in general but to pollinators specifically Within Australia this has been emphasised by recent cataclysmic fire impacts ongoing extreme drought events and the wider consideration of climate change This second edition strengthens coverage of these issues beyond that of the first edition The Flowering of Australia's Rainforests makes timely contributions to our understanding of the nature and function of the world's pollinator fauna plant reproduction dependencies and the evolutionary pathway that has brought them to their current state and function Illustrated with 150 colour plates of major species and rainforest formations this reference work will be of value to ecologists and field naturalists botanists conservation biologists ecosystem managers and community groups involved in habitat restoration
