

Agriculture, WTO, Trade Liberalisation, and Food Security Challenges in the Developing Countries

BY KALIM SIDDIQUI

The agriculture sector plays a historic and integral role in the socioeconomic development of the country – it has a significant contribution to the per-capita income of both industrialised and developing nations and has helped in shaping the early civilisation to progression. This article will trace how the policy and reform challenges in agricultural development have helped in restructuring the economic fabrics of the society, and why food security is a crucial contributing factor in the growth of both the regional and international economies.

I will discuss herein the impact of trade liberalisation (i.e., free trade) on the agricultural sector and also food security in the developing countries. The WTO (World Trade Organisation) entered into force in 1995 as the most powerful multi-lateral institution worldwide, not least because of bringing free trade into agriculture and its dispute settlement mechanism. It is understood that if a country, after for instance struggling with its internal finances, secures a bail-out from the IMF (International Monetary Fund), its obligations cease when it has repaid its loan in full, whereas once a country joins the WTO, in contrast, it will be locked into the organisation in perpetuity.

The WTO's negotiations at Doha in 2001 were fundamentally flawed, as they were clearly designed to protect the interests of big corporations, especially those linked to agricultural commodities and based in the developed countries, while conferring very little benefit to farmers in the developing countries. Therefore, at the next WTO ministerial meeting, which is scheduled for June 2020 in Kazakhstan, it is important that developing countries propose reform within the WTO in order to protect their agricultural and industrial sectors and indeed their general interests.

The WTO's trade liberalisation policy draws its theoretical support from David Ricardo's ideas of 'comparative advantage' and 'free market' in order to achieve efficiency and cost reduction.¹ 'Market' as a term, generally refers to a competitive environment and competition, but under capitalism it does not always mean this. Agriculture And World Trade Liberalisation:

Agriculture and the WTO Merlinda D. Ingco, John D. Nash, 2004-03-17 Annotation This comprehensive reference explores the key issues and options in agricultural trade liberalization from a developing country perspective Throughout the focus is on ensuring that the outcome of WTO negotiations contributes to growth in developing countries Global Rice and Agricultural Trade Liberalisation Mohammad A. Razzaque, Edwin Laurent, 2008 The liberalisation of trade in rice is likely to have huge welfare implications for countries dependent on its production and trade This book explores the poverty and welfare implications of this liberalisation for India Bangladesh Pakistan and Sri Lanka and identifies the effects on different groups within rice dependent developing countries Agriculture and The World Trade Organisation G. S. Bhalla, Jean-Luc Racine, Frédéric Landy, 2008-05-05 The volume offers to the reader a multi faceted dialogue between noted experts from two major agricultural countries both founding members of the Word Trade Organisation each one with different stakes in the great globalisation game After providing the recent historical background of agricultural policies in India and France the contributors address burning issues related to market and regulation food security and food safety the expected benefits from the WTO and the genuine problems raised by the new forms of international trade in agriculture including the sensitive question of intellectual property rights in bio technologies This informed volume underlines the necessity of moving beyond the North South divide in order to address the real challenges of the future Agricultural Trade Liberalization in a New Trade Round Merlinda D. Ingco, L. Alan Winters, 2001-01-01 Annotation This collection highlights the main trade issues of importance to different regions of the world Agriculture and Trade Liberalisation Extending the Uruguay Round Agreement OECD, 2002-03-28 This report provides information on the average tariff levels and on the use of tariff rate quotas export subsidies and export credits by selected OECD countries for temperate zone agricultural products The Effects of Trade Liberalisation on Agriculture in Smaller Developing Countries Andreas Schneider, 2006 WTO Negotiations and Agricultural Trade Liberalization Eugenio Díaz-Bonilla, Søren Elkjær Frandsen, Sherman Robinson, 2006-01-01 Based on original research by the Food and Resource Economic Institute in Denmark and the International Food Policy Research Institute in Washington DC this book addresses the controversial issue of the effects of developed countries agricultural policies on developing countries Written from the perspective of developing countries it addresses the main issues raised by developing countries governments politicians farmers organizations NGO s trade specialists and development specialists It focuses on the key issues of food security poverty regional agreements multifunctionality in agriculture and the trade of genetically modified products as an input to policy reform within the World Trade Organization trade negotiations Agriculture and World Trade Liberalisation M. R. Redclift, J. N. Lekakis, George P. Zanias, 1999 The impact of free trade on the environment and the employment of environmental policies as non tariff protectionist policies are topics which are currently receiving a great deal of attention Proponents of freer trade insist that by leading to higher growth rates and per capita incomes trade increases the demand for environmental quality and helps poor countries escape the poverty generated pollution trap The purpose of this book is to discuss the current and future issues surrounding agriculture and its relationship to trade sustainability and the environment It is based on selected papers from an international conference entitled European Agriculture at the Crossroads Competition and Sustainability held in Crete in 1996 and further updated with the European Commission's Agenda 2000 in mind Written by leading authorities from Europe and the USA this book is essential reading for researchers and policy makers in agricultural economics rural sociology the environment and European studies

China's Entry into the World Trade Organisation Peter Drysdale, Ligang Song, 2003-09-02 This volume provides a detailed up to date analysis of the strategic issues and policy options of China's accession to the WTO Quantitative analysis demonstrates how tariff reduction resulting from China's accession to the WTO will benefit the Chinese economy as well as the rest of the world The book argues that there is no single trade policy initiative likely to result in larger gains in international trade in the foreseeable future than China's accession to the WTO

Agricultural Policy in Europe Alan Greer, 2005-05-20 This book provides a stimulating account of agricultural policy which goes beyond a narrow concern with the mechanisms and operation of the Common Agricultural Policy CAP and instead constructs a broader canvas developing an assessment of the relationship between national international and supranational institutions and actors in the agricultural sector Among the theses covered by the book are the different national policy styles across Europe in this sector the evolution of the CAP safety and regulation the environment and technological developments in food production such as genetic engineering

Implications for UK Agriculture and EU Agricultural Policy of Trade Liberalisation and the

Wto Round Great Britain. Parliament. House of Commons. Agriculture Committee, Griculture Committee, 2000 The liberalisation of trade in agricultural products regulated through the World Trade Organisation is having a profound effect on the UK agricultural industry and on EU agricultural policy The Committee believes that the WTO should not be transformed into a universal reform league if that puts at risk its ability to sustain its primary purpose as a rules based regulator of world trade agreements The best way to assist small farms in the UK which find themselves under threat is through reform of the Common Agricultural Policy CAP and a gradual shift away from distorting production subsidies to a policy based on clear objectives for environmental protection and rural development

Trade Liberalization in China's Accession to the World Trade Organization Elena Ianchovichina, Will Martin, 2001 China's forthcoming access to the World Trade Organization involves reform in many sectors both domestic and trade related The starting point for reform is a partially reformed economy with relatively high import duties in which export sectors benefit from liberal duty exemptions on inputs Both China and its major trading partners will gain from access with China gaining most perhaps half of the estimated 56 billion in annual welfare gains Some developing countries will suffer small losses because of increased competition from China The adjustments required are greatly reduced by China's dramatic liberalization in the 1990s
