Aids Connection The:

HIV / AIDS, Health and the Media in China Johanna Hood, 2011-01-25 HIV AIDS is an increasingly serious problem in China with an increasing number of new cases every year. As a result, HIV organizations have boomed with both state and non-governmental organisations responding to the threat with campaigns to increase public awareness of the disease utilising the media as the primary tool to reshape citizens' understandings and views of HIV AIDS. This book explores how HIV AIDS is portrayed in China's media. It argues that despite increasing education campaigns, media coverage and social and academic openness towards HIV AIDS, many Chinese of the majority Han ethnic group regard infection as a distant possibility, believing themselves to be immune and infection a problem only for certain non-Han ethnic groups with perceived lower moral standards, in particular black Africans. The book explores how HIV AIDS is reported, analysing the language used in constructing and encoding the health narrative, its subjects and ideas about the disease. It demonstrates how China's media frequently employs negative events to present the most extreme possibilities of poverty, danger, disasters and disease, with black Africa portrayed as an antiquated, distant and socioculturally and politically backward place, uniquely unsuitable for the containment of disease, in contrast with the progressive, scientifically sophisticated and morally upstanding Chinese. It argues that this discourse has had the effect of distancing many Chinese from the perceived possibility of infection, thus compromising the effectiveness of public health campaigns on HIV AIDS. It suggests that the key to combating the spread of the disease lies in challenging the racialised narratives through which the disease is portrayed in China's media, rather than simply by aiming to educate greater numbers of people. AIDS, South Africa, and the Politics of Knowledge Jeremy R. Youde, 2016-03-23 Through an in-depth examination of the interactions between the South African government and the international AIDS control regime, Jeremy Youde examines not only the emergence of an epistemic community but also the development of a counter epistemic community offering fundamentally different understandings of AIDS and radically different policy prescriptions. In addition, individuals have become influential in the crafting of the South African government's AIDS policies despite universal condemnation from the international scientific community. This study highlights the relevance and importance of Africa to international affairs. The actions of African states call into question many of our basic assumptions and challenge us to refine our analytical framework. It is ideally suited to scholars interested in African studies, international organizations, global governance and infectious diseases. The Link between Masculinity, Alcohol and HIV/Aids in Malawi Norwegian Church Aid, 2016-04-30 It is common knowledge that HIV is widespread in Malawi as it is in many other countries of Southern Africa. It is also a well-known fact that women suffer most and frequently are blamed the most. Many attempts are being made to address the pandemic and reduce the suffering, and often women are the focus. This book differs in that it looks at the other side, men. It contends that men have to play a major role in the fight, not only by changing behaviour but also by understanding concepts of masculinity and that women may also profit from that. AIDS

Experimenting with Humans and Animals Anita Guerrini, 2003-07-02 Ethical questions about the use of animals and humans in research remain among the most vexing within both the scientific community and society at large These often rancorous arguments have gone on however with little awareness of their historical antecedents Experimentation on animals and particularly humans is often assumed to be a uniquely modern phenomenon but the ideas and attitudes that encourage the biological and medical sciences to experiment on living creatures date from the earliest expression of Western thought Here Anita Guerrini looks at the history of these practices from vivisection in ancient Alexandria to present day battles over animal rights and medical research employing human subjects Guerrini discusses key historical episodes including the discovery of blood circulation the development of smallpox and polio vaccines and recent AIDS research She also explores the rise of the antivivisection movement in Victorian England the modern animal rights movement and current debates over gene therapy From publisher description Homosexuality and Medicine, Health, and Science Wayne R.
